U. S. and Britain 'Freeze' Japanese Trade

Heavy Red Attack Held In Salient, Nazis Claim

Russians Pounding Smolensk Spearhead; Battle in Ukraine Berlin Reports Great

Resistance Stubborn

By the United Press

Berlin, July 25.—Russian forces were acknowledged officially tonight to be smashing at the spearheads of the Nazi drive on Moscow in fierce counterattacks but the German panzer columns were said to be stubbornly holding their advance positions.

The German military spokesman described the Russian attacks as fiercest east of Smolensk and farther southwest along the Dneiper River, against the Nazi advance forces beyond Mogilev.

On the Leningrad and Kiev fronts, meanwhile, huge German forces engaged in "a gigantic battle of decision" were said to be closing steel traps on the defenders. Entrapment of the entire Red armies in the southern Ukraine was threatened, it was said.

Put Dead at Three Million

[Three million Germans, German allies, and Russians have been killed or wounded in the five-week-old Russo-German war, Political Commentator Averin said on the Moscow radio, according to a broadcast picked up in London.]

Confident that the German war machine, after wiping out "pockets" of Russian resistance and securing its communications, soon will be rolling forward again, the spokesman asserted that Adolf Hitler is determined to crush Russia completely.

"There will be no more Soviet Union after this war," it was stated, in response to a question as to why the German press is now referring to Count Freidrich Werner von der Schulenburg as the "former German ambassador to Moscow."

"The Soviet Union is merely a structure of Bolshevist rulers which will be removed after the war," the spokesman said.

Authoritative Nazi quarters indicated that the Luftwaffe will launch merciless "Warsaw-type" bombings of Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev in an effort to smash Russian resistance behind the front and force the surrender of the three key cities.

Moscow Radio Silent

[The Moscow radio closed down at 7:10 o'clock last night, for the second consecutive night, indicating another German aerial attack.]

The German high command reported that, for the fourth straight night, the Luftwaffe had bombed "military objectives" in Moscow, particularly in the eastern quarter and north of the Kremlin.

South of Kiev, the official spokesman said, pressure is being exerted against the Red army between the bend of the Dnieper and the Dniester, "bringing Soviet forces there into a gradually untenable position."

German bombers were said to be carrying out constant heavy assaults on Russia's important Black Sea ports of Odessa and Kherson, where harbor works and supply ships were said to have been damaged.

One, Shot in Back, Is Seriously Hurt; Guard Is Arrested

Bullets from a night watchman's pistol ended the attempt of eight youths to crash a party here last night and three of them fell wounded, one seriously.

The shots were fired by Harry Rithman, 58, special officer at Ourisman's Auto Sales Co., 610 H Street Northeast, where the youths were trying to get into a crab feast which Ourisman employes were having on the roof.

The wounded youths, taken to Casualty Hospital, are:

Peter Cattucci, 18, 1024 Fifth Street Northeast, serious wound in the back.

George Kalavitinos, 18, 1003½ Third Street Northeast, shot in the leg.

Nick Caponiti, 17, 640 Eighth Street Northeast, leg wound.

Rithman, who lives at 608 H Street, next door to the auto company, was arrested and charged at the Ninth Precinct Station with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Policeman H. H. Vogel, who was off duty and attending the party, said the youths entered the building from an alley in the rear, started up the ramp and met the watchman. He said a tussle followed, during which four shots were fired with a .38-caliber pistol.

Transocean, Nazi Agency, Fined $1,000

Convicted of being a propaganda agency of the German government and the National Socialist Party, Transocean News Service yesterday was fined $1,000 in the District Court and ordered to pay costs of at least $15,000.

Ten men and two women jurors who had listened for seven days to the Government's exposure of the German agency's operations in this country and South America took only 33 minutes to return a verdict of guilty on the indictment, which charged failure to register as a foreign propaganda agency.

"The real purpose of the Transocean agency was war," Special Assistant Attorney General George A. McNulty told the jurors in his concluding argument. "It was war. Not a shooting war, but a war of propaganda, a phase of the Nazi ideal of the total war.

"Don't be misled!" McNulty shouted.

"Their real mission in the United States was to gather harmful propaganda against us and send it to Berlin, send it to South America to stir up ill will."

By 30 witnesses and more than 300 exhibits seized in a raid on the Transocean offices, the prosecutors traced the history of the agency

Woman Retrieves Life Savings From Pot Tossed In for Defense

Kindy remove your life savings from your pots and pans before turning them over—the pots and pans—to your neighborhood aluminum collector.

Failure to do so causes considerable trouble and loss of time. Quincy Skinner, a beer truck driver, who has been recruited to collect aluminum in his vehicle, will vouch for that.

A child tossed a coffee pot on Skinner's truck as it was parked in front of a store on Twenty-third Street Northwest.

As Skinner drove away a woman dashed from the store and frantically called for him to stop. Distraught, she demanded return of her coffee pot.

Skinner reluctantly agreed. Apparently the child had taken the wrong piece of aluminum and added it to the collection. So they dug and searched and dug, until finally the woman identified one of the pieces as her own.

Calmly she removed the pot's strainer, reached inside and took out $300.

"My life's savings," she explained, pocketing the money and tossing the pot back on the truck.

Skinner scratched his head and gazed after her as she departed.

"Please," he asked a reporter later, "see if you can't put a stop to this sort of thing."

A search for the woman and the store, the location of which Skinner could not specifically name, was fruitless.

Meanwhile, the largest single gift of aluminum in the District's collection campaign was turned over to the Government by the Statler Hotel. It amounted to some 54,000 pounds, which was to have gone into windows of the new Statler Hotel here.

The metal, enough to build two four-motor bombers, was bought by the hotel corporation before the current acute scarcity existed, hotel officials declared, and quoted OPM

'Wheeler Goes Too Far,' Says Roosevelt

President Roosevelt yesterday criticized Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, for sending postcards to men in the Army urging they take part in a campaign against American entry into the war.

He told a press conference at his Hyde Park (N. Y.) home that he agreed with the captions on two editorials in yesterday's papers which read "On Dangerous Ground" and "Mr. Wheeler Goes Too Far." The captions, he said, accurately cover the situation.

In Washington, Senator Wheeler struck back at the President. The leading opponent of the Administration's foreign policy told reporters:

"The President is one who has gone too far, in taking us down the road to war and permitting Secretary Stimson and other members of the Cabinet to openly advocate steps which mean war."

Wheeler again defended his action in mailing out more than one million postage-free cards urging those receiving them to write to the Presi-

Special House Rule Opens Way For War Offices

The House Rules Committee yesterday approved a special rule which would waive all points of order against a 35 million dollar item in the eight billion dollar supplemental defense appropriation bill for a new War Department office building in nearby Virginia. The action paves the way for passage of the measure probably Monday.

Objection to the building fund by Representative Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, on the ground it had not been previously authorized prevented final action by the House Thursday on the big new defense bill.

Treasury Expected To Move Workers

The Treasury Department today is expected to announce the decentralization of the Division of Disbursements and the Division of Accounts and Deposits. The main offices of these two divisions will be maintained here, but their regional offices and some employes from the central offices will be moved to a nearby city, according to the plan under consideration. Several hundred employes are expected to be moved out of Washington.

Senate Group For 'Limited Emergency'

Military Committee Favors Restricting Wording to Holding Of Army in Service

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday agreed to report legislation declaring a national emergency, but limited solely to holding selectees, Reservists and National Guardsmen in service.

The group rejected the recommendations of Secretary of War Stimson, backed up by President Roosevelt, for a Congressional proclamation of a national emergency written in broad terms. Instead, members said, the committee will word their resolution to declare a "limited emergency" confined to retaining the troops.

Difficulties in phrasing the measure prevented a final vote on it yesterday, but members said that a "count of noses" resulted in an "agreement in principle" on legislation along this line.

Senators on the committee want to make it plain that the controversial measure does not involve an even more dynamite-laden proposal—lifting the ban on service of the citizen-soldiers outside the Western Hemisphere.

Most authorities agree that even a full and unlimited declaration of an emergency would not repeal this prohibition, but some opponents of the measure see a danger that it might be interpreted so.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of the Senate anti-interventionist bloc, said yesterday that an amendment to the troop retention measure will be offered, specifically repeating the Western Hemisphere restriction.

"I think it will be approved without question," he predicted.

Closed Hearing Monday

Meanwhile, the House Military Affairs Committee wound up hearings on the legislation. They agreed to meet behind closed doors to write a bill and several members forecast they would vote to send it to the House floor at that session.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who acted as spokesman for the Senate committee, said the group was in agreement as to lifting the 900,000 limit on the number of selectees and planned to insert some language to require the Army to discharge men whose retention would create a hardship on their families.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, has testified that the Army will release such "hardship" cases and already is discharging some 2,000 such men a month.

Members pointed out that Congress can limit the number of selectees actually called by its control over appropriations.

Drafting legislation to accomplish the purpose of declaring an emergency to invoke so-called "extension clauses" in existing law permitting retention of the citizen-

Freezing Japan's Credits May Bare U. S. Legs to Cold

By the Associated Press

There may be many more bare-legged women in the United States as a result of the Government's action in freezing Japan's assets.

Silk comes from Japan, and it was considered possible that trade between the two countries would be hard hit because of the difficulty of making payments.

There is only about two and a half months' supply of silk in the United States. Nylon production this year, at best, would fill only about one-eighth of the requirements for stocking production, according to experts, and the nylon might be needed for parachutes and other military purposes, at that.

The experts had one other thought. There's no law against wearing cotton.

Johnson Convicted Of Tax Evasion

Camden, N. J., July 25 (AP).—Enoch L. (Nucky) Johnson, Atlantic City Republican leader, was convicted today by a Federal jury on two counts of an indictment charging income tax evasion. He was acquitted on a third count.

The verdict convicted the 58-year-old Atlantic County treasurer of evading income tax for the years 1936 and 1937.

Crisis Expected

By the United Press

Tokyo (Saturday), July 26.—There were increasing indications today that the government expects an extremely grave crisis during the weekend and is making last-minute preparations to face practically a complete severance of financial relations with the United States and the British Commonwealth.

[There was no prompt official reaction in Tokyo to President Roosevelt's order freezing all Japanese funds in the United States.]

Freezing of Japanese funds in the United States and its possessions, all units of the British Commonwealth, including India and the British colonies, have been anticipated. It was said that all possible precautions have been taken and no grave shocks to Japan's financial or economic structure are expected.

There was increasing bitterness against the United States and newspapers and official spokesmen joined in attacking President Roosevelt for his implied threat to cut this country off from all American oil supplies and force Japan by "all possible means" to abandon her policy of a Greater East Asia economics sphere.

Control of the press was virtually complete and it was, therefore, significant that lengthy attacks appeared in nearly all newspapers.

The general tenor of press criticism was that President Roosevelt deliberately had forced a crisis in East Asia by intensifying his policy of "encircling Japan" in recent months. The newspaper Nichi Nichi warned that the Japanese people must be prepared to make "all sacrifices."

Food regulations were tightened, the milk ration halved, and more restrictions placed on shipping.

Many British and American residents were withdrawing their funds from banks and converting all money into Japanese currency in fear that parallel action by London and Washington freezing Japanese assets in British-American controlled areas would result in identical action here. Housewives, fearing inability to obtain funds from bank deposits, were collecting all the cash they could to be sure of money for current food needs.

No mention of a certain impending event (presumably the Japanese military occupation of South Indo-China which is expected this weekend) may be made but it was noted that Japan's interests in Thailand were given great emphasis in the press.

Japan Expected To Land 40,000 In Indo-China

Saigon Believes Troops Will Enter This Weekend

By the Associated Press

Saigon, French Indo-China, July 25.—Japan will pour thousands of troops with war equipment into newly-won military, naval and air bases in southern French Indo-China, starting this weekend, usually reliable sources reported tonight.

Maj. Gen. Raishiro Sumita, chief of the Japanese military mission in Indo-China, was expected to arrive here tomorrow from Hanoi to direct the operation.

[Foreign sources in Shanghai said they heard from Saigon that Japan would land between 40,000 and 50,000 troops in Indo-China about July 30. Foreign intelligence reports in Shaghai also said that "upwards of 1,000,000 men" were being called to arms in Japan in the greatest mobilization since outbreak of the war with China four years ago.

[The Japanese news agency Domei reported in a dispatch from Nanking that the Chinese government at Chungking had ordered troops to proceed to Indo-China's northern border.]

Japan has won the right to post troops at several coastal points in southern Indo-China, as well as to station warships in Camranh Bay and at Saigon and to establish several air bases in the southern part of the colony, it was reported au-

Give Nippon Six Months

Japan Would Quickly Lose Economic War, British Say

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 25.—A total economic blockade by the United States and the British Empire would cripple Japanese industry within six months of an outbreak of war with Japan, British economic warfare experts said tonight.

Japanese occupation of French Indo-China will bolster the empire's stocks of five basic commodities but even these gains, which experts called "one of the chief reasons for the move into Indo-China," would be outweighed by the effects on Japanese industry and export trade of strict economic sanctions.

The statement was made in full knowledge of "immense stocks" of war material bought by Japan in the world's markets for the last two years.

Anticipating the Japanese move into Indo-China, already a matter of agreement in principle between Vichy and Tokyo, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Parliament today that "certain defense measures in Malaya already have been enforced" to meet "the potential threat."

Eden called the Japanese move a threat to British territories and interests in the Far East, disclosing that Britain also was in close contact with the Netherlands East Indies, and the dominions.

Referring to denunciation of Japan as an aggressor by Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State of the United States, Eden said this was "timely and salutary."

The question of a total blockade of Japan seemed to be far from academic in London. It was admitted that such a move would be the least expensive and the most readily applied action open to Britain which already maintains blockade forces in the Red Sea, the Indian Ocean and the Atlantic.

Chinese Turn Over Their Credits Here To Prevent Tokyo Finding a Loophole

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Led by President Roosevelt, the entire Anglo-Saxon world and its Dutch allies joined last night in freezing all Japanese assets within their grasp, thus threatening the Tokyo government with loss of the greater part of its foreign trade.

The actions were taken in stern punishment for the Japanese occupation of French Indo-China.

Within the space of five hours, the United States, the British and the Netherlands empires, massed their stupenduous economic strength to curb further Japanese expansion in the Pacific.

The parallel orders actually meant a "freezing of trade" between Japan on the one hand and the United States, the British Empire and the Netherlands possessions on the other. Japan, for instance, will be unable to spend a dollar in this country, move a ship out of a United States port, sell a pound of silk or even pay the expenses of its embassy and consulates without a specific license from the United States Treasury. Identical restrictions are imposed on her dealings with the other countries following the American lead.

Neither the United States, nor the other cooperating governments, indicated whether Japan would immediately lose all its foreign trade with the antiaxis coalition, but President Roosevelt and his British and Dutch allies had assumed power to choke off that vital trade at a moment's notice.

China Helps Plug Loophole

By specific request of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, of China, the President also froze that country's assets here, to make sure that the Japanese did not escape the new orders by screening their funds as Chinese deposits. The other governments also included China in their orders.

"All financial and import and export trade transactions in which Japanese interests are involved" were thus brought under strict Government control, the President said in a statement issued simultaneously here and in Hyde Park, N. Y., where he is weekending.

The terms of the sweeping executive order, supplemented by other orders issued last night, had these effects:

1. Armed the President with Power to shut Japan off from vital supplies here, such as American gasoline and oil, which have helped fuel the Nipponese war machine.

2. Subjected all Japanese ships in U. S. harbors to control, forbidding them to sail, load or unload without Treasury permission. Officials last night said there were three such vessels in American ports, while 40 others were hove to on their course to the Pacific Coast, awaiting developments.

3. Forced Japanese diplomats and consuls here to seek "allowances" from the Treasury for their expenses, thus giving the United States valuable supervision over bank transactions here by Japanese official agents.

4. Ended the usefulness to Japan of sales of gold to the United States, which have provided Japan with half a billion dollars in for-

Body Blow Dealt Japanese Industry

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

President Roosevelt dealt Japan an economic body-blow last night when he froze by executive order Japanese assets in the United States.

Economists here foresee the gradual disintegration of the Japanese textile industry, which, operating with American cotton and Japanese cheap labor has threatened to monopolize the world's markets. Her shipping also will suffer unless Japan moves fast to acquire new sources of oil, before her stocks are exhausted.

India, one of the rich markets for Japanese textiles also will be lost through Great Britain's parallel action with that of the United States. The keynote to the effect of the President's action on Japanese economy is summarized in the following excerpt from a statement issued by the Treasury last night.

"This executive order, just as the order of June 14, 1941, is designed among other things to prevent use of the financial facilities of the United States and trade between Japan and the United States, in ways harmful to national defense and American interests, to prevent the liquidation in the United States of assets obtained by duress or conquest, and to curb subversive activities in the United States."

The economic warfare will affect Japan's principal export—silk. The United States has been the largest market for that product.

From 1926 to 1930 the average American imports from Japan were $379,362,000, but with the outbreak of the war, in 1937, Japanese exports to this country declined to 204 million dollars in that year and reached a low of $126,762,000 in 1938. Exports to this country in the first five months of this year aggregated only $57,570,000.

United States exports from Japan have been smaller than our imports. Before the outbreak of the war with China in 1937 this gave Japan a favorable trade balance through which the Japanese, prior to 1937, obtained dollar exchange which they needed to bolster their financial position.

However, the Sino-Japanese war turned the tables and Japan began buying heavily of scrap and gasoline. She had to pay for this in dollars, and this led to the draining of the gold resources of her central bank. Progressively, and despite stringent economic measures, Japan's financial position internally and externally has been weakened and this is reflected in the drop in her government bonds and her currency—the yen.

Indicative of her adverse trade balance was the large shipments of her gold stocks to the United States since 1937. In 1940 alone the Japanese exported to this country $111,731,234 of the yellow metal. What Japan lost by larger imports from the United States, she made up by the so-called "invisible" items in her trade balance. This consisted of shipping revenues, but now these also will be shut off inasmuch as the movements of her ships to the United States and the British Empire will be curtailed.

The freezing order will affect 131 million dollars of Japanese investments in the United States consisting, at the end of 1930, of 91 million dollars of short-term balances and 40 million dollars of long-term investments. When the Japanese take reprisals they will affect 241 million dollars of American investments in Japan.

Americans also hold 105 million dollars of Japanese government corporate dollar bonds, traded on the New York stock and New York curb exchanges.

The chief Japanese investments in the United States are in the form of distributing concerns for Japanese products, branch banks and cotton compress companies. Chief American investments in Japan, besides government bonds, are in branch automobile factories and petroleum products facilities.

The United States embarked on an economic war with Japan about a year ago when the President, under Executive order, barred the export of high-octane aviation gasoline to that country. However, the export of other gasoline and oil was permitted. Subsequently, scrap iron exports were barred.

More recently, Mr. Jones announced that he had signed an agreement with the Mexican government to purchase all of the strategic materials which were produced in that country. This step barred the export of lead and copper to Japan. Prior to that the Reserve Metals Corporation bought up large stocks of manganese, copper, nitrates and other products from Latin American countries.

eign exchange in the last three years.

5. Gave the United States control of all Japanese funds here, estimated by the Commerce Department to total $131,000,000, but reported unofficially to exceed that figure. Retaliation would trap $217,000,000 of American investments in Japan.

6. Instructed all Japanese in the United States to submit to a census of their holdings.

With the new freezing order assets here of all three members of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis are now under American control. German and Italian funds were frozen June 14.

The sweeping action was a logical sequel to the charge made Thursday by Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, that Japan had committed an act of "aggression" against Indo-China which affects American security, endangers our defense supplies and menaces the Philippine Islands, which are only 700 miles from Japan's new naval bases in Indo-China.

The President said that his order was designed "to prevent the use of the facilities of the United States and trade between Japan and the United States in ways harmful to national defense and American interests."

To Curb Subversion

Other objectives, he declared, were to "prevent the liquidation in the United States of assets obtained by duress or conquest" and also "to curb subversive activities in the United States."

Criminal penalties were imposed for violations of the Executive order.

Chinese assets were frozen "for the purpose of helping the Chinese government," the President said, and he declared the action a "continuation of this Government's policy of assisting China."

General licenses that were immediately issued by the Treasury relaxed the freezing order so as not to interfere with genuinely Chinese transactions. Apparently the American and Chinese governments were cooperating to prevent persons in China unfriendly to the Chiang Kai-shek regime from continuing their activities.

Under a general license, the Treasury allowed Japanese and Chinese nationals to obtain up to $500 a month of their own funds for living expenses.

Empire on Probation

How soon actual blows that might cripple the Japanese empire economically would be launched was a matter of speculation, but officials intimated that for the time being Japan would be on probation and would not feel the full effect of the new restrictions if she follows a moderate course. The machinery had been created, however, for invoking overnight the full economic power of the United States against the empire.

The freezing order has the effect of placing all trade between the United States and Japan on a license basis. Thus only those transactions which the Treasury permits may be carried on. Administration of the freezing order will disclose whether it is to amount to a sharp warning to Japan or an immediate body blow at her economic structure. It is open to either interpretation.

The Treasury's order applied to the following:

"Money, checks, drafts, bullion, bank deposits, savings accounts, any debt, indebtedness or obligations, financial securities, commonly dealt in by bankers, brokers, and investment houses, notes, debentures, stocks, bonds, coupons, bankers' acceptances, mortgages, pledges, liens, or other rights in the nature of security, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, trust receipts, bills of sale, any other evidences of title, ownership or indebtedness, goods, wares, merchandise, chattels, stocks on hand, ships, goods on ships, real estate mortgages, vendors' sales agreements, land contracts, real estate and any interest therein, leaseholds, ground rents, options, negotiable instruments, trade acceptances, royalties, book accounts, accounts payable, judgments, patents, trade marks, copyrights, contracts or licenses affecting or involving patents, trade marks or copyrights, insurance policies, safe deposit boxes, and their contents, annuities, pooling agreements, contracts of any nature whatsoever, etc."

President Roosevelt, at his Hyde Park press conference, reflected the gravity of the Far Eastern developments. He told reporters that Japan's move into Indo-China is awakening America to full realization of the international situation.

Sees Shift in Opinion

Public opinion in the United States has registered a marked change in the last three months in cognizance of the deadly peril of the entire world situation, he said. He would not say that the latest moves of Japan had increased America's danger.

Still, he insisted that the public still is not sufficiently aware of the danger of the whole world situation.

The Chinese Embassy explained last night that the inclusion of China in the executive order was designed to prevent the Japanese from transferring their funds into Chinese credits and thus circumventing the order.

The Japanese, it was said, have large sums in Chinese accounts in Shanghai and other occupied centers.

The Treasury said general licenses were being issued for the Chinese Nationalist government and the Central Bank of China, freeing them completely of the controls.

Foley, acting as Secretary of the Treasury in the absence of Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., announced that six Treasury officials would take off this morning in a Navy plane for Honolulu to assist officials to enforce the order in Hawaii, where there is a large Japanese population.

Another group will leave for Manila for the same purpose and reason. Members of the policy committee that worked out the orders were Foley, Assistant Secretary of State Acheson, and Francis Shea, Assistant Attorney General.

Chinese Expect Full Blockade

Before the order was issued, Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, said there would be "a complete economic blockade" against the Pacific partner of the Axis. He called at the State Department to see Welles and made his statement to reporters.

"This latest Japanese aggression worries the Chinese," he said, "because of the possibility of a Japanese attack on Yunnan from Indo-China bases, an attack on Burma, bombing of the Burma Road, and threatening of Thailand (Siam.)

President Roosevelt had explained Thursday that the United States policy of conciliating Japan by permitting her to buy supplies here had been aimed to keep war out of the Pacific.

His statement, made to volunteer civilian defense workers, set forth the theory that by allowing oil to go to Japan, the United States had for two years forestalled a Japanese invasion of the Dutch East Indies. Significantly, his exposition of the conciliation policy was phrased entirely in the past tense.

'First Time'

Wheeler Praises Roosevelt on Japan

By the United Press

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, currently engaged in a blazing feud with President Roosevelt over foreign policy, last night approved the order freezing Japanese and Chinese assets in the United States.

"I think the President did the right thing," he said. "You may say for me that I agree with him—for the first time."

Japanese Here Draw Funds, Beat Freezing

The order freezing Japanese funds in this country came as no surprise to Japanese nationals in Washington, a number of whom had already taken steps to obtain personal expense money.

One Japanese newspaper correspondent here displayed a wallet bulging with large bills yesterday morning, many hours before the order was issued, and others are understood to have drawn sums from their banks.

Although details of how individual Japanese in the United States will be affected have not been divulged, nations of other countries whose funds were frozen have been allowed to withdraw up to $500 a month from their bank accounts for living expenses. All above that has been subject to Treasury approval.

Won't Venture Criticism

Japanese nationals here were reluctant to express their personal reaction to the order on grounds that they did not know how it would affect them. As for broader aspects of the order, they intimated they did not feel privileged to take advantage of this country's hospitality by criticizing the Government.

Clarke H. Kawakami, correspondent of Domei, Japanese news agency, said he believed little inconvenience to nationals here would result from the order. There may be some confusion, he said, for a week or ten days, but "some convenient arrangement" doubtless will be made.

Kawakami said he had taken no steps to assure himself of having cash on hand, but that he was not worried.

Number Unknown

The Japanese Embassy had no comment on the freezing order.

Nobody who would hazard a guess as to how many Japanese are in Washington could be located last night. The Justice Department's alien registration division said its figures had not been broken down yet, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service pointed out that no Japanese are naturalized in this country.

There are no industrial or commercial establishments of any size here under Japanese ownership.

made through the State Department to avoid seizure of the ship.

About 8:30 p. m. the N. Y. K. office said "some delay in the arrival of the Tatuta Maru is anticipated."

Officials said they hoped to have further information "shortly," but pointed out all authority for directing ship movements rested with the line's headquarters in Tokyo.

The liner, carrying 247 passengers, originally was due at 5 a. m. Thursday. It came almost within sight of the mainland, but late today was understood to have proceeded more than 300 miles out to sea before again turning eastward.

Initial reports indicated that Japan was hesitating to place the Tatuta Maru's silk cargo in American ports where an order to freeze Japanese credits might be applicable.

The ship, skippered by Capt. T. Takahata, carries a crew of 280.

Officials said they had no idea whether the liner would head for home, for a port in Mexico or merely wait off the coast pending negotiations about landing the Americans.

No Word of Others

From some 40 other Japanese vessels at sea, scheduled for arrival in America now or in the near future, there was no word.

West Coast ports, meanwhile, were almost entirely cleared of Japanese ships. Two of them sailed hurriedly today.

At Tacoma, the Yamasimo Maru sailed shortly after noon, supposedly for Astoria, Ore. A libel was filed a fe whours earlier by the U. S. customs office at Seattle, charging oil pollution of harbor waters, but the ship hastily posted $1,000 bond and departed.

JapanExpected To Retaliate In Shanghai

By the Associated Press

Shanghai (Saturday), July 26.—American official quarters today expressed belief Japan's first retaliatory action against the freezing of her assets in the United States and the British Empire would be taken at Shanghai.

They expected Japan might shortly take over the International Settlement and the French Concession, where more than 4,000,000 Chinese and 100,000 foreigners reside and where American investments valued at $50,000,000 are situated. British investments there are valued at $200,000,000.

Actual occupation, they believed, might be carried out through the Japanese-sponsored Nanking regime which, under Japanese prompting, has been threatening since its formation in March, 1940, to "abolish" foreign concessions and settlements.

Land-Office Business

San Francisco, July 25 (AP).—Anxious Japanese stood in long lines at bank windows today, drawing out funds in anticipation of the President's order freezing assets in this country.

The Yokohama Specie Bank, a center of Japanese-American business for the Pacific Coast and the country at large, did a land-office business—all outgoing. Harried officials and clerks were besieged with questions.

The President's order was received here before the close of the business day, and its effect was electric, not only in the city's large Japanese colony and Chinatown but in American importing circles as well.

Banks reported exporters and importers, nervous for many days over the impending blow to their business, appeared almost as fearful over red-tape regulations under the licensing procedure as over out-and-out business stoppages.

Oil Trade Cut Off

An oil company executive said there was no doubt the order meant a complete cutting off of the oil trade, and estimated that Japan had been taking about 15 per cent of the flow of oil from California alone.

The offices of the Japanese consul general and of Domei, the Japanese news service, hummed with telephone calls from worried business and civic leaders of the Japanese colony. Special concern was voiced over the order that no Japanese ships would be permitted to leave port.

Informed sources said "several thousand" Japanese troops would be stationed at Saigon and along the southeast Indo-China coast and within Cambodia, which is on the Gulf of Siam along Indo-China's border with Thailand (Siam).

[The Japanese Domei news agency said in a dispatch from Bangkok that the Thailand premier, Maj. Gen. Luang Bipul Songgram, had proclaimed strict neutrality for his country.]

All of these positions into which Japan is moving bring her closer to Singapore, Britain's great Far Eastern naval base, British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

The newspaper Molonte Indo-Chinese at Hanoi, the colonial capital, hinted in an editorial, presumably government-inspired, that Japanese occupation of the new bases would be a step for further moves south.

"Indo-China," the paper said, "is on the way to Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies. The Formosa and Hainan (Japanese Islands) bases being too distant for her South Seas policy, Japan required facilities in southern Indo-China . . ."

Members of the French military staff here departed for Tonkin in the north. Ship traffic from Haiphong, Indo-China's chief northern port, was resumed after cessation for several days.

Both French and Japanese authorities at Hanoi refused to discuss the agreement.

Vichy, Japan Agree on Rule Of Indo-China

By the United Press

Vichy (Saturday), July 26.—The French foreign ministry issued a communique at 4 a. m. today announcing the conclusion of a French-Japanese agreement for the mutual defense of French Indo-China.

The announcement was made immediately after news had been received of President Roosevelt's order freezing Japanese assets in the United States.

The communique reported merely the conclusion of a general agreement and said that supplementary military and technical accords remained under examination.

French sources insisted the final defense plan would respect the territorial integrity of Indo-China and French sovereignty over that colony, as pledged by Japan.

It was admitted, however, that there is no specific Japanese pledge to withdraw Japan's armed forces from Indo-China as soon as peace is restored between Britain and the Axis powers. No time limit was fixed for the Japanese occupation, it was said, since France and Japan are collaborating for Indo-China's defense on a partnership basis.

Agreement With Vichy Announced in Tokyo

Tokyo (Saturday), July 26 (U.P.).—The government today announced an agreement with France regarding joint Japanese-French defense of French Indo-China.

Announcement of the agreement was made suddenly at noon after a period of the utmost secrecy.

The agreement places the defense of Indo-China jointly in French and Japanese hands and was made after Japan had charged that Britain was organizing a "plot" to gain control of the French Asiatic colony.

Under terms of the arrangement Japan pledges herself to respect the territorial integrity of Indo-China and French sovereignty over the country.

Wheeler Assailed By Roosevelt

dent they are opposed to going to war. He said that it would be wrong for anyone to "deliberately send out propaganda to soldiers," but declared he had not done so.

The postcards were sent to the "country-at-large" from names on a commercial mailing list, Wheeler repeated, adding that he doubted that "one hundred of them were addressed to anyone in the Army."

Secretary Stimson on Thursday assailed Senator Wheeler for sending the cards to soldiers, declaring the action "comes very near the line of subversive activities against the United States, if not treason."

The anti-interventionist leader in reply said Stimson was "ga-ga" and yesterday added that if "it is treason to ask the President to keep his promises, let them make the most of it."

He charged that Simpson was "trying to give the impression" that he was carrying on an antiwar campaign among members of the armed forces. There is "not a damned bit of truth" to this, Wheeler declared.

Battle of Mouths

President Roosevelt volunteered his observation about Wheeler's action at his press conference. He noted that he hadn't been asked to comment on the incident, and a reporter assured him that "we were going to get around to it."

For months, the President and his aides on one side, and Wheeler on the other, have been carrying on a running battle over foreign policy, in which strong words have frequently been exchanged.

Yesterday, Senator Wheeler defended the practice of franking out postage-free political material, declaring that 13,500,000 cards had been mailed by the Democratic National Committee during Mr. Roosevelt's 1936 reelection campaign.

"The only regret I have is that I wasn't able to send the postcards to every mother in the United States," he stated.

The Western Senator said that "Stimson's actions emulate Hitler's" and contended that the War Department chief and other members of the Cabinet "have used the radio and every other means to get us into war."

"I intend to endeavor to offset the misinformation and propaganda they are putting out," he added.

Reckord Warns Men

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 25 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding officer of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division, has issued a warning to all personnel of the division against signing petitions opposing War Department legislation.

Tallahassee, Fla., July 25 (AP).—Jimmie Joanos, of Tallahassee, received by mail one of Senator Burton K. Wheeler's "keep out of war" post cards. Jimmie won't write to President Roosevelt as Senator Wheeler urged.

Jimmie is 6½ years old. He is the son of Emanuel Joanos, restaurant operator.

U. S. Is Sound, Cycling Judge Finds on Tour

JUDGE WELSH
Back From His 667-Mile Bicycle Tour

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 25.—United States District Court Judge George A. Welsh, back from a 16-day 667-mile bicycle tour in which he talked with scores of "ordinary Americans," is convinced America's future is safe.

"Whatever may be in store for us," the 63-year-old white-haired jurist declared, "you can count on the people. They will not fail us."

Judge Welsh pedaled away from his Delaware county estate July 7 for an uncharted tour of Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland. His return—like his departure—was unannounced.

Traveling incognito, the judge chatted with mechanics, plumbers, paperhangers, railroad crossing watchmen—and one Governor, Walter W. Bacon, of Delaware.

He found, he said, that America hasn't changed much in the half-century since he was a boy.

"Notwithstanding the alarmists," he declared, "notwithstanding the external differences, America at heart is the same America in which I grew up."

Savings Rescued From Donated Pot

Director William S. Knudsen as saying that the contract had been "entirely entered into" before the emergency situation developed.

More than 80 per cent of the metal has already been fabricated into window frames from virgin aluminum. It is in the plant of a firm having aircraft parts orders and thus some of the metal may go directly into planes, officials stated.

The action of the hotel group and the metal manufacturer was characterized by Knudsen as a "demonstration of patriotism" and a "great benefit to the national defense program." He added that the agreement to turn the metal over to defense purposes "resulted in considerable loss to both the companies involved."

250,000 Pounds to Date

Campaign officials said contributions will continue to be received for the "next day or two" when the accumulated metal will be sent away for smelting after being turned over to the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department. About 250,000 pounds have been received to date.

The donations of aluminum are being stored temporarily in bins at all police precinct stations and at Post Square Thirteen and a Half Street on Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. A beat policeman has been especially instructed to guard the Post Square pile to prevent sneak thieves making away with any of the defense metal. At the precincts piles are usually located so as to be under the gaze of policemen inside. No thefts from the precinct or Post Square piles have been committeed, police say.

Japanese Expect Weekend Crisis

Japan will not sacrifice her position in Thailand, Nichi Nichi said, and it should be remembered that the Japanese navy still is dominant in this part of the world.

The acting spokesman of the government's information board, Iichi Ushi, told foreign correspondents yesterday that Japan wants no trouble with the United States. Washington is mistaken if it considers the Three Powers Pact among Japan, Germany and Italy as "anti-American," he said, adding that Japan signed the pact because she wants peace, especially in the Far East.

Army Probes Plane Crashes For Sabotage.

By the United Press

Dayton, Ohio, July 25.—Crashes or forced landings of five military planes, two of them bombers destined for the Royal Air Force, today led to a United States Army Air Corps investigation of the mishaps, all of which occurred within 24 hours in Ohio territory.

The latest occurred when a twin-engined Douglas B-18 bomber made a forced landing on a farm near Granville with only slight damage. The pilot, Capt. J. B. Buck, of Albrook Field, Canal Zone, lone occupant, is safe.

Two Unhurt on Lockheed

Officers at Patterson Field said a board of inquiry would investigate the crash of a twin-motored Lockheed Hudson as it was taking off for Canada this morning. The two pilots escaped injury.

Another board left for Cardington, where a sister ship of the Lockheed crashed on a farm late yesterday, killing the pilot and copilot. Both Lockheeds were destined for Britain.

The pilots and five enlisted men of an Army transport which crashed late yesterday on Patterson Field escaped with minor bruises after a motor caught fire and dropped from the ship.

Officials also reported a minor mishap which occurred late yesterday. A test pilot who had taken off from Patterson Field ran out of fuel near West Liberty and made an emergency landing.

Ferried by Army

The Lockheeds, en route to Montreal, were being flown across the country from the Lockheed plant at Burbank, Calif., by United States Army pilots assigned to the ferry command.

Both 18-ton bombers burst into flames when they crashed and burned so completely that determination of sabotage would be extremely difficult.

Lieuts. Richard F. Rush, 25, and N. L. Warner, ferry command officers, perished in the flaming wreckage of the bomber which fell near Cardington, just before the crash, the radio control tower at Wright Field reported, the pilots radioed that their ship's motors were "sputtering' 'and they were going into a nosedive.

Limit Agreed On For Emergency

soldiers has developed into something of a legal task, in view of the desire to limit it to this purpose.

"The last phrasing we had before us," Senator Lee said, after the committee adjourned last night, "started out with the flat declaration that the national interest is imperiled and that a national emergency exists. Then, in subsequent paragraphs, we will limit it to the sole purpose of retaining the selectees, reservists and guardsmen."

Senator Hill, of Alabama, Democratic whip of the Senate and a member of the committee, told reporters that the objective of the committee was to restrict the resolution to this purpose.

"We do not want to open up all of the issues that would be raised by trying to have a full national emergency declared," he said. "To do that would result in prolonged debate and we have an emergency situation in the Army confronting us."

The committee, it was said, rejected a proposal of Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, to pay each man retained in service $30 for each month held.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth Division at Fort Meade, Md., composed of National Guardsmen and selectees from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, testified before the House committee yesterday morning. He said that while he and many of his men "would like to go home," 90 per cent of the men and all the officers were in favor of staying in service because they felt it was their duty.

"I honestly feel the security of the Nation is imperiled," he added.

Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Ninth Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., also urged approval of the legislation, as did Brig. Gen. Lewis O. Hershey, acting draft director.

Hershey recalled how he and other National Guardsmen were unable to get a job back in 1916 because employers believed they would soon be recalled to military duty. The same thing will happen now if selectees and Guardsmen are released, he maintained.

Frank Murray, of South Bend, Ind., president of the National Parents of Selectees, Inc., told the committee that passage of the measure would destroy the morale of the selectees. He said he knew of one group of soldiers who had talked of going on a "slow-down strike" if they are held.

Murray urged that the committee raise the pay of the troops to "equalize the sacrifice" they are making compared to those in civil life. He suggested a basic pay of $100 a month, with $50 of it put into defense bonds to be paid them on discharge, "like the World War adjusted compensation bonus."

Russia Reports Lines Holding, Raids Repelled

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), July 26.—The Soviet information bureau communique issued early today said that fighting continued in the Porkhov, Polotsk-Nevel, Smolensk and Zhitomir sectors, thus indicating no major change on the battle fronts.

The communique said the Rumanian port of Constanta again had been bombed by the Soviet air force. It reported also that 34 German planes had been brought down Thursday.

Russian resistance at the front was matched here by cool civilian reaction to Nazi night air attacks.

For it was stated officially that the fourth successive aerial assault upon this capital—delivered in two sections Thursday night and early Friday—was a greater failure than any that had come before. Only a single raider was able to break through the city's defense, it was declared, and that lone attacker was shot down, along with another destroyed outside of Moscow.

Fighting afield, as reported yesterday by the Soviet command's afternoon communique, was still far-spread but not a single new battle area was mentioned.

Heavy Action General

Specifically reported was heavy action not only at the Russian center, about the Polotsk-Nevel-Smolensk triangle, below Leningrad, about Porkhov, and in the Ukraine about Zhitomir, but on the far Finnish front in the Petrozavodsk sector north of Lake Ladoga.

All this was covered by the Red general staff only with the accustomed remark that the fighting was "stubborn."

Again, the continuing offensive activity of the Red air fleet against German mechanized columns and airdromes was stressed.

Official accounts made it appear that guerrilla fighting was spreading far behind the Nazi lines and that scouts using the ancient advantage of familiar terrain were causing the invaders many a local disaster.

For example, a guerrilla party operating near a village identified as "N" was said to have launched a dawn surprise attack on the Germans. A large Nazi force was enticed into a bog, it was added, and there substantially reduced.

These roaming guerrillas, possessed of a greater mobility than any regular unit, are armed with machine-guns, automatics, hand grenades and in some cases with antitank guns.

[Russian accounts of general fighting in every important theater were supported by military information available in London, which was to the effect that there had beeen a measurable, though slight, renewal of the German offensive all along the front. Nothing decisive was reported anywhere, however.]

High-Flying 'Fortresses' Hit Gneisenau

By the Associated Press

London, July 25.—United States-built four-engined bomber monoplanes bombed the German battleship Gneisenau at Brest yesterday from nearly seven miles altitude, the greatest height ever reached by the R. A. F. in operational flights, the air ministry said tonight.

Recounting preparations for the first real bombing from 36,000 feet, the ministry's news service said:

"The crews who flew the fortresses to Brest were all picked men. The medical officer at the airdrome from which the squadron took off had himself flown in one of the fortresses to get first-hand information on the probable reaction of the crews.

"More than 80 per cent of people, he said, were unable to fly at that height. Anyone with fat on him would be quite unfit."

Become Unconscious

The crews were given a preliminary course in pressure chambers in which they permitted themselves to become unconscious in order to realize that "it is nothing to be frightened of" and so as to become fully aware of the necessity of close attention to oxygen equipment.

The R. A. F. reported seven direct hits on the Gneisenau with heavy armor-piercing bombs, but the credits, as between the American-made and other bombers taking part in the attack, have not been distributed officially.

There were no authoritative reports this evening of any large-scale daylight operations by the R. A. F. over German territory, and compared with recent operations the sky over the Channel was quiet except for the usual patrol activity.

However, large fires and great damage were left in the German naval bases of Kiel and Emden as a result of British bombing last night, the air ministry announced today. Wilhelmshaven, Rotterdam and German-occupied France also were attacked.

Failure, Say Nazis

Berlin, July 25 (INS).—Four-motored bombers of the American "flying fortress" type, used Thursday in a Royal Air Force aerial offensive against the German-held French Channel coast, have failed to overcome Luftwaffe defensive measures, a Nazi military spokesman declared tonight.

A lone Nazi fighter pilot, Air Sergt. Teschmer, attacked a squadron of 12 American bombers, shooting down the leader and forcing the rest to scatter, the spokesman said. Teschmer then picked off eight more bombers, he stated, adding that under-trained and inexperienced R. A. F. pilots were proving easy victims for the Luftwaffe.

He also claimed that a new observation system changed fighting tactics in which Luftwaffe pilots ignored British fighters and centered their fire upon bombers, was taking heavy toll of the British.

Berlin Has Air Raid

Berlin (Saturday), July 26 (AP).—Berlin experienced another air raid last night after sleeping undisturbed for 53 consecutive nights. Authorized sources said no bombs were dropped within the city limits.

Argentina's Truce Proposal Accepted by Peru, Ecuador

By the United Press

Lima, July 25.—Peru announced tonight its acceptance of a proposal by Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu of Argentina for the pacification of the River Zarumilla frontier zone, scene of Peruvian-Ecuadorian hostilities.

The announcement, however, reiterated that Peru was not responsible for the present hostilities, which it charged to Ecuadorian aggression.

At the same time a diplomatic source said Japanese Minister Sakamoto today sent a note to the minister from Ecuador, Carlos Larrea, in which he emphatically rejected Ecuador's charge that Japanese officers and soldiers were mixed with Peruvian troops on the border. The Japanese legation's view, it was said, was that this charge was "dangerous propaganda," and Ecuador would be asked to prove the allegation.

[Ecuador, in response to the same "supreme call" from Argentina suggesting a truce, already has replied favorably, it was reported in Buenos Aires.]

[United States Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday sent identical messages to the foreign ministers of Ecuador and Peru expressing the "whole-hearted" support of the United States of the recent proposal of the Argentine foreign minister for the cessation of border hostilities. Welles said it would be impossible for the United States, Argentina and Brazil to assist in relieving the situation, "unless immediate measures are taken to restore quiet in the frontier region."]

OPM Places Defense Cost At 50 Billions

The size of the national defense program was calculated by the OPM yesterday at a new high figure, $50,785,000,000, with another $8,200,000,000 in defense appropriations now pending. It was also revealed that defense disbursements for the month of June almost reached the one-billion mark, about half of Germany's estimated monthly armament spending.

The fifty billion-dollar program, the OPM division of research and statistics estimated, consists of more than 47 billions of United States Government appropriations, contract authorizations and defense funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, plus $3,669,000,000 of British orders.

The rate of spending, which jumped from 177 million dollars in July last year to $994,200,000 in June, is said to represent the most readily available public measure of deliveries of defense items and progress of construction, inasmuch as the disbursements are mainly made only for articles received.

The almost one billion dollar monthly rate is about equivalent to that reached by Germany during its sixth year of rearmament. Together with the amount of British spending for military purposes, which is about equivalent to the American rate, the two democracies combined probably top the present rate of German disbursement, officials said. They emphasized, however, that the German war machine probably receives more in terms of goods for equivalent monetary expenditures.

The breakdown of United States and British commitments in this country, the OPM said, shows that almost 12 billion dollars has been allocated for airplanes; about eight and one-half billions for naval vessels, merchant ships and transportation equipment; another eight billion for guns and ammunition; five and one-half billions for industrial facilities and about 17 billions for posts, depots, other equipment and miscellaneous items.

since Hitler took over the Reich in 1933.

The home office in Berlin then became an instrument of the German state, governed by daily orders from the propaganda ministry and a general policy of following the lead of the German foreign office and the Nazi Party.

Three years ago, Dr. Manfred Zapp came to America to set up branches in New York and Washington. He was soon followed by Guenther Tonn, who took charge of the material Transocean sent to South America and once admitted he was ordered to "send everything harmful to the prestige of the United States."

Zapp worked hand in glove with the German Embassy, acknowledging that he was under its direct control. German consulates "sold" the Transocean service to German language newspapers throughout this country and collected the fee of $1 a month, although the postage was three or four times as much.

Transocean collected only $3,045.46 in 25 months of operation. For its operation Berlin spent $164,652 more, besides contributions from the embassy and consulates. This money was all spent, however, and it appeared last night that the Government will have only a "claim" for the $16,000 fine and costs.

Zapp and Tonn were indicted when the agency was last March, but were released and fled the country last week. When Defense Attorney Emil Morosini protested yesterday because he did not have the men for witnesses, McNulty retorted that the men were gone because "of international gangsterism and highjacking tactics by the Nazi government of Germany."

The day Transocean was indicted, McNulty said, the Gestapo seized Jay Allen, of North American Newspaper Alliance, and Richard Hotellet, of United Press, without charge, and held them as hostages until Zapp and Tonn were allowed to flee. He concluded:

"We were forced to submit to this gangsterism to save two innocent lives—because nobody knows what the Gestapo would have done to them—but we don't have to do more than keep the letter of that bargain. This case goes on!"

Presiding Judge T. Whitfield Davidson remarked that he might have preferred the diplomacy of President Andrew Jackson, who once told France to pay an old debt or face the consequences, which shocked France but got the money. However, said Judge Davidson, the situation was that Zapp and Tonn were gone, that Tranoscean was before the court and would have to do the best it could.

Morosini made hundreds of objections in the trial, protesting almost every piece of evidence brought out by the Government. His vehemence drew him a $10 fine for contempt of court yesterday, after he clashed with Special Assistant William P. Maloney over a minor point. Later, Morosini apologized to the court and was excused from paying the money.

Aiding McNulty were also Special Assistants Edward J. Hickey and Albert E. Arent. This staff a few weeks ago obtained the conviction of Dr. Frederich Ernst Auhagen for failing to register as a propagandist. Auhagen now is in jail here, under a sentence of eight to 24 months.

Nazis Ready To Take Over Red Industries

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, July 25.—More than 1,000 German administrative, industrial, engineering and business experts, headed by the ideological leader Alfred Rosenberg, are waiting on Adolf Hitler's word of command to send them swarming all over occupied Russia to take a conquered country under German administration.

Rosenberg already has a complete ministry staff pledged to work under his direction. Every Russian automobile plant, airplane factory, chemical works and engineering concern already has its appointed German administrator who is ready to move in when and if this territory is safely in German hands.

It is no secret that Rosenberg is slated to head this minutely organized machine with the title of Reichsminister for the occupied eastern areas. His realm would be the Baltic states, the Ukraine and Russia proper.

It would not include Poland, which is Reichsminister Hans Frank's domain, where he already is entrenched firmly as governor general.

Many names have been bandied about in the German capital regarding the personnel chosen by Rosenberg. The following appear to be the men selected:

State secretary (in charge of administrative details)—Dr. Alfred Meyer, gauleiter for the North Westphalian district.

Administrator for the Ukraine—Herbert Backe, state's secretary in the Reich's agricultural ministry.

Administrator for the Baltic states—Heinrich Lohse, gauleiter for Schleswig-Holstein.

Administrator for Russia proper—Erich Koch, gauleiter for East Prussia.

3 More British Convoy Vessels Sunk, Italy Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 25.—Fascist observers estimated tonight that the British had lost more than 700,000 tons of shipping in a two-day running attack on a Mediterranean convoy by Italian planes and light naval forces.

The high command said three merchant ships were destroyed yesterday, making a total of six sunk out of a convoy of 18, besides the sinking of a destroyer and one unidentified warship and damage to several other escorting warships.

The three said to have been sunk yesterday were a 10,000-ton steamer sunk by bombs and a 12,000-ton steamer and a 15,000-ton tanker sunk by air-launched torpedoes.

Warships damaged, according to the Italians, were three cruisers hit with torpedoes and seven warships with bombs—a battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser, a destroyer and three unidentified vessels.

The sunken destroyer has been identified in London as the 1,375-ton Fearless.

"That is a warning," the newspaper La Tribuna said, "to the enemy and his accomplices . . . on the extreme danger they run in waters of our sea. It is a warning to American traders."

The full-scale attack on the convoy, presumably carrying supplies for the British Army of the Nile, was opened by planes Wednesday.

The score in planes lost in the attack and defense was given here as eight to five, in Italy's favor.

Cruiser Launching Today

Quincy, Mass., July 25 (AP).—The new light cruiser, San Diego, expected to be one of the fastest of her class in the United States Navy, will be launched tomorrow morning at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Nazis Prepare Turkish Drive, Russians Say

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 25.—S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, said today that capture of documents on the German-Russian front had disclosed Germany was "secretly preparing a surprise attack" on Turkey.

Lozovsky showed the documents to foreign correspondents at a press conference and said the Turkish government would be told about them.

The documents, which were said to have been captured from the Fifty-second German Chemical Regiment, included maps of European Turkey with the Dardanelles and the Bosporus.

Marked on the maps were the locations of metal works, port buildings, airdromes, arsenals and other military objectives. Among the documents was a German leaflet headed "Military and Geographical Data Concerning the European Part of Turkey and the Straits," and listing details on the terrain and the location of Turkish troops.

Ankara Is Annoyed

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, July 25.—Reports abroad today that Germany's abandonment of blitzkrieg tactics against Russia pressages an Axis move against Turkey, Iran and Transcaucasia provoked annoyance in Turkish circles here today and aroused new apprehension among the foreign diplomatic corps here.

Turkish official sources categorically denied all reports that new German pressure is being exerted against Ankara and high foreign diplomatic circles here received assurances that Germany had put forward no proposal for the transport of German troops or munitions across Turkish territory.

At the same time, neutral foreign observers here marked with some concern the alacrity with which Berlin seized upon the rumors of German pressure—most of which seemed to originate at Stockholm—and sought to convey the idea that the British themselves are preparing the groundwork for some new political activity in Turkey.

British diplomatic circles here took a somewhat serious view of the situation today, expressing belief that Germany is apparently making an effort to confuse Anglo-Turkish relations, possibly as a part of a general campaign of bewilderment during which the Germans could prepare a diplomatic offensive against this part of the world, to be followed by panzer divisions—if strong words fail.

Russia to Send Mission to U. S.

By the Associated Press

An indication that Russia is to send a special mission to the United States to negotiate the purchase of war supplies came yesterday from Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State.

He told a press conference that he could say nothing on the subject yesterday, but added that he underlined the yesterday.

Welles said he and the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, had discussed orders which Russia wishes to place in this country. He declined to give details on the ground they were a military secret.

U. S. Will Buy Fabric to Clothe Chinese Armies

The United States Government is negotiating the purchase of 10,000,000 yards of cloth which will be turned over to the Chinese government under the Lend-Lease Act to adequately clothes Generalissimo Chang Kai-shek's army, it was learned yesterday.

This phase of lend-lease aid is expected to ease the strain which has been placed on the makeshift Chinese textile mills operating in the interior of China, which have been working ceaselessly under the most adverse conditions to supply the needs of China's embattled army.

With the elimination of the demands for warm clothing for the Chinese army, the mills now will operate to clothe the huge civilian population. It will also release agricultural land, now devoted principally to the cultivation of cotton, for other crops such as foodstuffs, of which China is short.

U. S. Will Ask Rigid Quotas On Wheat Crop, Wickard Says

Secretary Wickard yesterday notified farmers that the Agriculture Department would propose rigid marketing quotas for next year's wheat crop.

A proposal to invoke marketing control will be submitted to a grower referendum at a date yet to be set. Approval by at least two-thirds of those voting is required.

Quotas were established for the first time on this year's wheat crop. The system, carrying with it a penalty of 49 cents a bushel for over-quota grain, has encountered severe criticism by some farmers.

Wickard, in a proclamation declaring the department's intention to establish quotas, said the Nation's wheat supply was at record levels and that, under provisions of the AAA Act, it was necessary for the department to take steps to curtail production as well as sales.

Under quotas, a farmer is limited to the sale of grain produced on his AAA acreage allotment. Such allotments will be about 12 per cent smaller than for this year's crop.

Wickard made known the department's plans well ahead of the winter wheat-planting season. The bulk of the winter wheat crop is seeded in September and October. Many farmers complained that this year's quotas were not proposed until months after the grain was planted and that had they known ahead of planting time they would not have overplanted their allotments and run into the 49-cent penalty.

Wickard estimated that the Nation's wheat supply for the marketing year beginning July 1, 1942, would be at least 1,300,000,000 bushels. The quantity expected to be needed to supply domestic and export requirements was placed at 739,000,000 bushels.

The Secretary's supply estimate was based upon forecasts that the surplus from the 1941 and previous crops would be at least 600,000,000 bushels and that 1941 production would be at least 700,000,000 bushels. Production this year has been placed at about 930,000,000 bushels.

Nazis 'Describe' Furious Soviet Charge Into Withering Artillery

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 25.—German soldier-reporters at the front tonight told of vicious hand-to-hand fighting with Russian troops entrenched in the Stalin Line and said that Red army warriors were "stubborn unto death."

"Often they had to be slain in their rifle pits," one dispatch said in telling of German infantry storming the Red positions. Russian counterattacks also were acknowledged and at times Nazi artillery was "firing point-blank at a distance of 100 yards" against the charging soldiers of the Red Star.

In two villages in the Stalin Line region the Russians first attacked the Germans, one soldier-reporter said.

"The artillery was hard pressed. Firing point-blank at a distance of 100 to 150 yards, the artillery was able to hold off the Russians.

"Then the German infantry advanced . . . horrible close fighting developed in the early morning light. The attacking soldiers in field gray and the Soviets, desperately defending themselves, faced one another at two yards. "The Soviets suffered terrific losses."

Then he described the difficulties in storming the Russian fortifications.

"Suited to the wooded hilly land and cleverly camouflaged with cut stalks of grain, trenches and machine-gun nests dotted the terrain. One position was connected with the other. Often there were four or five behind one another and full of Soviets.

"A furious fire broke loose against the storming Germans. The battalion broke through the wood, but only after bloody fighting.

"The Soviets resisted tenaciously. Stubbornly they stuck to their posts—stubborn unto death. Even in the hopeless situation they kept their weapons and often had to be slain in their rifle pits."

God is Love; His mercy brightens
All the path in which we rove;
Bliss He wakes and woe He lightens;
God is wisdom, God is Love.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn, an especial favorite of the Christian Scientists, was taken from Sir John Bowring's "Hymns" published in 1825. The author led a full life of service; he held many important official positions, and was a great leader of religious thought.

Mr. Callaway's weekly Cathedral music program will be broadcast from the Cathedral tonight from 8:05 to 8:20 o'clock over Station WINX. On the program will be the Voluntary on the 100th Psalm tune by Henry Purcell, as well as intermezzo from the "Sixth Symphony," by Charles M. Widor, and "Chorale Prelude on Rockingham," by T. Tertius Noble.

Christian Science Theme For Sunday Is 'Truth'

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services, including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "These are the things that ye shall do: Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates." (Zachariah 8:16.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "One's aim, a point beyond faith, should be to find the footsteps of Truth, the way to health and holiness." (Page 241.)

To Speak at Chapel Opening

Gen. George C. Marshall (right), United States Army Chief of Staff, will make the principal address at the military ceremony opening the new chapel at Arlington Cantonment tomorrow afternoon. Chaplain William R. Arnold (left), chief of chaplains, also will take part in the program

Religion and National Defense

First of 555 Army Chapels Opens at Arlington Tomorrow

The first of 555 chapels, under construction at Army centers, will be opened at Arlington Cantonment with a military ceremony at 1:35 p. m. tomorrow.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, will accept the chapel upon its presentation by Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, quartermaster general.

Gen. Marshall will cut the ribbon, thus opening the chapel to an inspection, during which an organ recital will be played.

The United States Army Band and troops of the Washington Provisional Brigade will take part in the ceremony. Chaplain William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains; Maurice W. Reynolds, chaplain of the Third Corps Area, and John B. Duncan, chaplain of Arlington Cantonment, will participate.

Ground for the new regimental chapel was broken in May, launching a $12,816,880 construction program of religious buildings at troop centers throughout the Nation.

The chapel here and the others have the appearance of a "typical American small-town church, a slant-roofed frame building with a steeple," a War Department release pointed out. Costing $21,220, each chapel will have seats for 400 soldiers.

Designed to serve all faiths, the chapel has a movable altar, constructed for use by various religious groups.

Construction of the chapels "will enable the chaplains to develop a full-time program of religious, cultural and pastoral activities. This, it is believed, will be an important contribution toward maintaining the high morale of the troops," a War Department release said.

"Except in a comparatively few posts that have permanent chapels, divine services in the enlarged posts, stations and mobilization camps of the Army are being held in theaters, mess halls, recreation buildings, tents and the open fields," it was pointed out.

Wilbur LaRoe, Jr., Will Be Vesper Service Speaker

Wilbur La Roe, jr., member of the D. C. Parole Board and chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak at the community vesper services at Washington Grove, Md., at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Speakers at the interdenominational services there for the next five Sundays will be: August 3, the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, Calvary Methodist Church; August 10, Samuel W. McIntosh, president of the Methodist Union, Washington; August 17, the Rev. J. W. Rosenberger, Rockville Methodist Church; August 24, the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, Takoma Park Lutheran Church; August 31, Dr. W. L. Darby, representative of the American Bible Society in Washington.

New York Minister To Occupy Pulpit Here

The Rev. Leland W. Kuns, assistant minister of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, New York City, will preach on "Christ's Greatest Sermon" at 11 a. m. tomorrow at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. He will also address the meeting of young people at the church at 6:45 p. m.

Dr. Kuns, a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, for the last four years has been associated at the Collegiate Church with Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, former pastor of the New York Avenue Church.

Trinity Methodist Pastor To Talk at 'Y' Service

The Rev. Daniel W. Justice, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. open-air service in Lincoln Park at 4 p. m. tomorrow. William R. Schmucker will preside and lead the song service, assisted by Mrs. Margaret Moffat as organist.

Page McK. Etchison, religious work director, Y. M. C. A., will speak at the 11 a. m. service at Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, and at 3 p. m. at the vesper service at Camp Letts.

The Rev. Edgar H. S. Chandler, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, Mass., who has recently returned from an eight weeks' visit in England, will occupy the pulpit of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

This service is in cooperation with All Souls' Unitarian Church and the Universalist National Memorial Church.

The Rev. Mr. Chandler, a graduate of Boston University, spent four years in graduate study in England, being student pastor of Bexley Heath Congregational Church, in Kent.

He was a member of the Congregational delegation at the Ecumenial Conference at Oxford, Edinburgh and Toronto. He was the representative of the Council of Congregational Christian Churches and of the American section of the World Council of Churches in England in 1941. He is at present giving a series of talks on "Democracy's Spiritual Defenses" at 1:30 p. m. Fridays, during July and August, over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co.

National City's Minister's Son Will Preach Here

Raphael H. Miller, jr., pastor of Linwood Christian Church, Indianapolis, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow at National City Christian Church, of which his father, Dr. Raphael H. Miller, is minister.

The Rev. Mr. Miller, who was ordained at National City Christian Church in May, 1940, and has twice preached from its pulpit, is taking graduate work at Butler University along with his present duties. He is a graduate of American University and of Colgate Rochester Divinity School.

He will speak tomorrow on "Ye Are Not Your Own." Mrs. Pauline Holcomb and Miss Maxwell Galloway will sing a duet, "I Waited for the Lord," by Mendelssohn-Bartholdy.

Student Will Speak At Park View Church

Rhodes Artz, ministerial student at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va., will speak on "What Is the Use of Praying?" at Park View Christian Church at the evening service tomorrow.

G. O. P. Reluctantly Accepts Tax Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee last night declared for the "general objective" of the $3,529,200,000 defense tax bill in a minority report demanding an "all-out" Administration effort for nondefense economies.

The ten minority committeemen declared tax increases "imperative" if the national credit is to be preserved and the defense program is to go forward. But the Administration was accused of "extravagant spending and reckless borrowing" policies impairing the Nation's finances.

The report said Republicans have no alternative but to support the general objective of the new tax bill for defense purposes but asked a mandatory reduction in expenditures for civil functions. It urged wiser and more prudent spending of defense money.

Faces Test Tuesday

Chairman Doughton meanwhile obtained Ways and Means Committee approval of the Democratic majority support on the tax bill filed with the House last night. The majority statement will be published today and on Monday the Rules Committee will ask for a closed rule barring all but committee-approved changes.

The test of strength on the bill will come Tuesday when a majority of Republicans teaming with some Democrats who oppose the bill's joint income tax provisions and other features will fight to open the measure to amendments from the floor.

Concern lest the rule be upset by a coalition of members opposing parts of the bill was expressed by one Administration Democrat on the committee, who warned that defeat of the rule would jeopardize the bill's revenue objective. Committee leaders said it would be impossible to write a bill of such magnitude on the floor.

Joint Return Chief Issue

Chief threat to the rule was the joint return provision. Taking cognizance of this, the majority report today is expected to cite comparative figures showing how the married taxpayer would fare under its own surtaxes and the joint return as against the Treasury's steeper alternative surtaxes.

One table will show that a childless married couple earning as much as $6,000 between them would be entirely unaffected by the joint return requirement but would have to pay $198 more in taxes if the Treasury rates are substituted.

The same table will show that a married couple with a $7,000 income would pay only $25 more under the joint return requirement than if they filed separate returns of $3,500 each. The same couple would have to pay an increase eight times that amount under the Treasury surtax proposal.

To seal the joint return in the House bill before it faces a certain Senate fight, committee sponsors of the plan are prepared to take the floor to contend that on a Nation-wide basis, 96 per cent of tax-paying couples now file joint returns, and that these would be penalized against 4 per cent that would benefit from its defeat.

Yesterday's minority report on the measure avoided a commitment on joint returns or other controversial provisions "since there are differences among us as to many of the items."

"Some of our members would have preferred to have seen the income tax base broadened, instead of confined to present taxpayers," said the Republican statement. "Some opposed the joint return provision. Some voted for a particular tax and others opposed it."

Repulse for Administration

The minority members said they cooperated in the bill's framing on a nonpartisan basis, but said, "The most that can be said in its favor is that it might have been worse." They commented, however, that "the Administration has been able to exert less influence in its preparation than on any tax bill since 1933." This obviously referred to defeat of the Administration's invested capital plan of excess profits taxation and modification of Treasury surtax proposals.

Conceding the need of the tax measure, the Republican report blasted away in campaign style at "prodigality" in spending and blamed the present "critical state" of the Nation's finances on New Deal "wastrel" policies before the defense program was inaugurated.

"They have accumulated a series of staggering annual deficits which have piled up the national debt to a point where even the necessary borrowing for defense will seriously jeopardize the public credit," the minority report said.

"They have taxed and taxed the people until the available sources of Federal revenue have been all but exhausted. Thirteen major tax measures have been enacted under the New Deal. The American people are now loaded down with a burden of taxation—largely in hidden levies—which is 50 per cent greater than under the World War revenue acts."

The report said the old 45 billion dollar debt limit was broken before the defease program was launched, that the new 65 billion dollar limit would be reached next year and "that before the present emergency is over the national debt may easily go to 100 billions.

The report recommended that further borrowing be kept "to a minimum by reducing expenditures wherever possible and by imposing such additional taxes as may be levied without unduly burdening the people or crippling production."

Criticizing the President for his failure to lead in nondefense economies, the report said "his very silence offers eloquent testimony as to the underlying cause of our country's present financial insecurity."

Signing the report were Representatives Treadway, of Massachusetts; Crowther, of New York; Knutson, of Minnesota; Reed, of New York; Woodruff, of Michigan; Jenkins, of Ohio; McLean, of New Jersey; Gearhart, of California; Carlson, of Kansas, and Jarrett, of Pennsylvania.

Breeze Corp. And Union Reach Terms

Labor and management representatives of the Breeze Corporation, Newark, N. J., last night were reported to have agreed to a National Defense Mediation Board formula to settle a dispute over union demands for a closed shop, check-off and a wage increase of 15 cents per hour.

The board settlement formula, issued after four days of conferences, was not immediately made public, pending union ratification. The organization involved is the C. I. O. United Auto Workers. It postponed a strike at the board's request.

The company, which manufactures radio equipment on Signal Corps subcontracts, employs 520 workers.

The panel on the case consisted of Charles Wyzanski, public representative; Eugene Meyer, employers' representative, and John Brophy, labor representative.

Keep Military Facts Out of Mail, Soldiers Warned

Fort Devens, Mass., July 25 (AP).—Acting on the advice of the British censor in the Western Hemisphere, the War Department cautioned all soldiers of this post to refrain from mentioning military facts in personal mail to friends, especially to those in foreign countries.

In a circular to Col. William A. Smith, post commander, which was posted on the fort bulletin board, the War Department said:

"The director of British censorship, Western Hemisphere, has brought to the attention of the War Department several letters written by United States Army personnel to individuals in foreign countries in which mention was made of matters pertaining to the military establishments. While the cases reported appeared to be the result of indiscretion, measures must be taken to cause this practice to be discontinued. All personnel of your command will be directed to omit all reference to matters pertaining to the national defense in personal letters written by them, especially to foreign countries."

2-Day Emergency Session Opened By District UFW A

Washington representatives of the United Federal Workers of America opened their first session of a two-day emergency conference last night at the Houston Hotel, announcing a new program combining a fight for civil liberties and wage increases.

Eleanor Nelson, national secretary-treasurer, opened the meeting by telling the representatives that the two issues must be joined. She said:

"The fight for the right of Government worker to join a union is an integral part of our drive to obtain overtime compensation and higher minimum pay for every employe of the Federal Government."

Committee reports will received at today's session, beginning at 2 p. m. A buffet supper for delegates will be held at 6:30 p. m.

Roosevelt Won't Revamp Defense Setups

Copyright by New York Times

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2.—President Roosevelt said today there would be no general reorganizing of the Office of Production Management and the Office of Price Administration and Civil Supply, the principal economic defense agencies of the Government. He indicated some minor changes.

While thus indirectly approving of the over-all defense set-up the President at the same time denied reports of friction with Gfeat Britain over functioning of the lease-lend program, and stated that Harry L. Hopkins, now in charge of the American end of the program, had buised himself in London talking to British officials on ways to smooth the British aid policy.

Answering a question regarding the reported jurisdictional feud between OPM and OPACS, the President said he told his Cabinet yesterday that there was involved a shift over from civilian and private automobile manufacture up to a certain point in the production rate.

Plans Further Study

One of the agencies, obviously the OPACS, wants the shift speeded up, he said, while the other wants it slower. He said that was all there was to it and he was confident it would work out all right.

When a questioner asked if executive orders regarding changes in the set-up were on his desk, the President replied that he supposed there had been a half dozen proposed orders, but none was satisfactory. The question is being studied further, he declared.

On whether this involved reorganization, the President replied that was the wrong word, that there would be no reorganization. That word implied, he said, changes from top to bottom, while nothing of the kind is contemplated. The change under consideration, he added, was so far down the line it would not affect the whole organizational set-up.

Regarding rumors that Hopkins had returned to Canada last night, Mr. Roosevelt said he knew he was in London last night, but did not knew when he would return. He would have had to hurry some to get back last night, the President said.

Denies Friction Reports

Asked if he had heard from Hopkins, the President answered that he telegraphed two or three days ago and said everything was going all right—that he had been seeing heads of departments over there on details of the aid program.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was sure there was nothing to reports that the British were dissatisfied with the way the lease-lend program is going.

In discussing the reported friction in the defense organization the President has several times referred to the importance of the change-over period when industries like the automobile industry shift from peacetime to military production.

Defense authorities said yesterday in Washington that they had made it plain to automobile manufacturers and their workers' organizations that they have a three-month cushioning period during which civilian production may proceed at 80 per cent of last year's rate. In that period, before a further reduction, they must see to replacement of dislodged workers, officials said.

Women Lashed After Rioting, Warden Quits

Montgomery, Ala., July 25.—Five white women prisoners accepted an offer to take whippings instead of losing privileges for participating in a Wetumpka State prison beauty parlor riot and provoked an incident which resulted in the warden's resignation.

Gov. Frank Dixon said today that seven lashes were administered by Warden J. Curtis Weldon, sr., to each woman following a free-for-all fight that developed when an inmate was denied a manicure Saturday in the newly installed prison beauty shop.

The Governor declared the women were not injured by the whippings. "But we just don't use those methods in our prisons," he asserted.

A poker was wielded, hair pulled, faces slapped and scratched in the beauty parlor row, Dixon disclosed. From another authoritative source it was learned that the five leaders had been offered the alternative of the whipping or being deprived of prison privileges for 60 days.

Permission of the department of corrections and institutions was not asked before the lashes were administered, the Governor said. Dixon emphasized that while prisoner floggings were permitted under Alabama law, regulations required that a permit be obtained.

Mack Freeman was named acting warden at Wetumpka, where about 300 women are imprisoned, 30 per cent of them white.

Strikers Get Navy Threat To Take Over

By the Associated Press

Determined to avoid lengthy delay in a two million dollar defense construction project at Key West, Fla., Navy officials declared their intention yesterday to take over the job and replace 900 strikers with imported civil service workers unless an early settlement was reached.

The A. F. of L. Laborers Union has demanded an increase from 40 to 62½ cents an hour. It rejected a compromise offer of 50 cents, which Lieut. Albert J. Fay, Naval Station Public Works officer, said was the top which would be approved in Washington.

Fay did not immediately set a deadline for resumption of work, but indicated early action.

The project includes a submarine base, an air base and a naval housing project. Workers on two low-cost housing projects in the area returned to work when a contractor granted the 62½-cents-an-hour demand.

New Demands at Vultee

New wage increase demands were heard at the Vultee aircraft plant in Los Angeles, where a dispute which brought official charges of Communist influence last fall ended with a 5-cent-an-hour increase, bringing the basic minimum pay to 55 cents.

The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers' Union asked that this be raised to 75 cents an hour.

Directors of North American Aviation, Inc., whose big factory at Inglewood, Calif., was taken over by the Army in a strike two months ago, approved wage increases for hourly rated employes and certain salaried employes.

Hourly rated employes earning less than $1.20 will be raised 10 cents. The minimum starting rate was fixed at 60 cents, with step-ups to 75 cents in three months; 5 cents an hour bonuses were fixed for second and third shift workers; a week's vacation with pay or the equivalent in cash was ordered, and salaried employes getting less than $200 monthly were increased $16 a month.

Representatives of the Nation's railroads proposed ten changes in working rules to spokesmen for 14 nonoperating employe organizations, who have asked for increases in minimum pay rates of as much as 45 cents an hour. The conference recessed until Tuesday, when the brotherhoods will reply to the proposals.

The present wage minima are 36 and 86 cents an hour in the nonoperating groups, such as clerks, telegraphers and machinists. The brotherhoods asked that these be raised to 86 cents and $1.15 an hour.

The five operating brotherhoods have asked a 30 per cent increase in basic pay, the lowest of which is $5.06 a day for switch tenders.

Dispute Rages Over WPA Ban In Defense Jobs

A sharp controversy over whether defense agencies recommended that WPA labor be barred from defense construction projects broke out yesterday when F. H. Dryden, acting WPA commissioner, declared that Federal conferees on the matter specifically rejected a recommendation to exclude relief workers from defense construction.

On Thursday, the OPM released the recommendation, declaring it had been adopted by A. F. L. building trades representatives and Army, Navy, Federal Works Agency and other Government departments. It "urgently recommended" that the OPM take administrative and legislative action in the interest of labor peace to exclude WPA workers on projects where union labor was employed.

In a public statement, however, Dryden said that "such a recommendation was discussed very thoroughly, and conferees . . . agreed that this recommendation was to be withdrawn."

In lieu of this, Dryden continued, the conferees suggested that when a building was being erected under contract (where union labor presumably would be employed) the contract should include the construction of the building in its "entirety"—a policy which would have the effect of barring WPA workers on private contract jobs, but which would not ban them on projects handled directly by the War and Navy Departments.

Apprised of Dryden's statement, an OPM labor division spokesman declared that his office had the distinct understanding that the first recommendation had been adopted, and had received written and verbal agreements on it from all of the parties to the conference.

Mexico Expels Nicaraguan Nazi, Charging Plot

Mexico City, July 25 (AP).—Informed diplomatic sources said tonight that Mexico had expelled a Nicaraguan political exile because he had urged the German Minister here to provide him with planes for a revolution in Nicaragua.

The ministry of the interior was said to have turned over the Nicaraguan, Gen. Roberto Hurtado, to United States authorities at Laredo, Tex., where he was imprisoned pending final disposition of the case.

Gen. Hurtado, a member of Nicaragua's Nazi Party, was said to have written German Minister Rudt von Collenberg that "I have enough arms, but I need planes" for a coup against the Managua regime that exiled him several years ago.

One usually well-informed source said there were persistent rumors that crated Messerschmitt fighters had arrived recently in the Caribbean area and it was believed Hurtado referred to these. The rumors of the arrival of the Messerschmitts, reported stored on out-of-the-way islands, have not been confirmed.

Arcade Laundry And Union Asked To NLRB Parley

Attorneys for the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry and the Laundry Workers Union yesterday said that they had been asked to meet with a representative of the National Labor Relations Board Monday morning to confer on strike issues. It was thought some effort would be made to arrange a consent election.

The meeting will be held at 9:30 a. m. with William M. Aicher, NLRB regional director.

A spokesman said the same union would ask Monday that still unsettled wage and hour clauses in the Rubenstein Cleaning & Dyeing Co. contract, under negotiation for several months, be submitted to the Labor Department's Conciliation Service. About 30 employes of the company stopped work last Tuesday to protest alleged contract violations.

Italy Imprisons 7 For Distributing Roosevelt Speeches

Rome, July 25 (AP).—Seven persons convicted of copying and distributing speeches by President Roosevelt, United States Secretary of the Navy Knox and Prime Minister Churchill were sentenced today to prison terms ranging from 3 to 12 years by a special tribunal from which there can be no appeal.

They were accused also, in one instance, of having altered a Roosevelt speech so that it was "offensive to the Italian government."

The defense urged that the speeches already had been published all over the world—including in the Italian press, although not in full—and stated that the accused distributed them only to a few friends. Five defendants, two of them women, were acquitted.

Sailing of Transport With Consuls Delayed

Lisbon, July 25 (AP).—Delay in clearing luggage through customs today forced postponement until 6 p. m. tomorrow of the sailing of the naval transport West Point to New York with 400 United States consular officials and other American citizens from Germany, Italy and occupied territory.

The vessel originally had been scheduled to sail tonight.

New assignments from the State Department sent 28 of the consular officials to posts in England, Ireland, Africa and Spain.

Judge Hays' Funeral Set For Monday

Funeral services for Judge Edward D. Hays, former Congressman from Missouri and member of the House District Committee, will be held at 10 a. m. Monday at the Chambers funeral parlors. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Judge Hays died unexpectedly yesterday at his home, 7117 Stratford Road, Bethesda, Md.

JUDGE HAYS

A lawyer, historian and jurist, the 69-year-old judge was born in Oak Ridge, Mo., and was graduated from the Cape Girardeau Normal School in that State. He served as probate judge of Cape Girardeau County from 1907 to 1916.

Resigning his judgeship to serve two terms in Congress, he later became a special assistant in the Department of Justice, and senior attorney in the Interstate Commerce Commission. He resigned in 1933 to enter private practice in Washington.

The last few years of Judge Hays' life were devoted to literary work, and he had nearly completed a history of Missouri at the time of his death.

He leaves a son, Dallas B. Hays; a daughter, Mrs. Floyd J. Baker, and a grandchild, Dallas Ann Hays, all of Bethesda, Md.

Bay Ferry Line Strike Is Averted

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 25.—Unlicensed crewmen and land employes of the Annapolis-Matapeake ferry manned facilities of the State-owned bay line without interruption today following abandonment of strike plans by union members.

Agreement late yesterday between Richard A. Bowie, secretary of Local 1608, International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. L.), and State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones was successful in averting a threatened strike of organized employes scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning.

R. A. F. Cadet Is Killed In Georgia Accident

Albany, Ga., July 25 (AP).—A British cadet training to fly for the R. A. F. was killed today when his grounded training plane was smashed by another trainer attempting to take-off.

D'Arcy H. Wilson, of Barkrooth, Windermere, Westmorland, England, was sitting in his plane on the flight line when the second plane crashed into him.

W. A. Smoot, Alexandria Ex-Mayor, Dies

William A. Smoot, former mayor of Alexandria, Va., died yesterday at his home, 220 North Washington Street, Alexandria, after a long illness. Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. Monday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Born in Alexandria 63 years ago, Mr. Smoot served as mayor from 1922 until 1930 when the pressure of other business forced his retirement. He was elected as the first president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce when that body was founded in 1906, and was elected to the office again in 1921. He also was the first president of the National Coal Dealers Association, and in business was head of the W. A. Smoot Co., coal, sand and gravel concern.

He also served as a member of the State Legislature during the session of 1918 and the special session which followed, and had been appointed dean of the Board of Visitors of Mount Vernon by the last five Virginia governors.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Harriet A. Smoot, his mother, Mrs. Betty Carter McGuire Smoot, and a son, Albert A. Smoot, all of Alexandria; a brother, L. E. Smoot, of King George County, Va.; and a sister, Mrs. Robert W. Fuller, of Washington.

Hague Charges 'Sell-Out,' Hands Reins to Edison

Jersey City, July 25 (AP).—Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, charging a "sell-out of the people of New Jersey to the railroads," announced tonight he was handing over the State leadership of the Democratic Party to Gov. Edison.

Hague, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and self-proclaimed "boss" of Jersey City for almost a quarter of a century, stated:

"There must be no question of Edison vs. Hague. It must be a question of the protection of the interests of the people."

Edison, former Secretary of the Navy, signed into law this week bills which compromised taxes owed the State of New Jersey by the railroads. The legislation had been strongly fought by Hague.

The mayor renewed his contention that the Governor, by supporting the legislation, had rejected a platform plank of the Democratic Party.

"That pledge," said Hague, "was to the effect that there would be no tax compromise or reduction of taxes to the railroads."

Army's Ace Movie Fan Gets Free Trip to Hollywood

Fort Lewis, Wash., July 25 (AP).—The Army's No. 1 movie fan, Buck Private Kenneth Wilkinson—bespectacled, red-haired infantryman from the Oklahoma plains—is going to Hollywood.

During the past year, he has probably seen more movies than any other man, woman or child in the country. Now he's got a special furlough and, with all expenses paid by the film colony, he will leave for California tomorrow night.

Wilkinson, who signed up with Company E, 186th Infantry, at La Grande, Oreg., last fall, discovered he wasn't much good at athletics and didn't know how to dance, so he started going to the movies.

He has been to 300 movies, counting double features, since arriving here last October 4. That's more than one a day.

In fact, he beat the record of Brig. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., public relations officer at Washington, D. C., whose job it is to see the movies. Gen. Richardson has made the relatively poor showing of 200 pictures during the same period.

Next District Day Will Be August 11

National defense legislation due before the House Monday will postpone the next "District Day" until August 11, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, majority leader, said yesterday.

Action on three local measures will be postponed. The bills include amendment to the liquor law preventing price advertising and limiting the zone to 400 feet from churches, schools and playgrounds; a measure liberalizing the District small loan law, and a measure raising the salaries of policemen and firemen $600 annually.

Three Shot Trying To Crash Party

"At about 9:55 p. m. I was on the first ramp and was attempting to keep a crowd of young men from coming into the building.

"I ordered them away and told them to leave the building. They refused to do this. I warned them that if they didn't leave the building I was going to use my gun. At that time I had my gun in my hand.

"I was not up against the wall. I was backing up the center of the ramp. The nearest man was 2 or 3 feet from me. I warned them again that if they came on I was going to shoot. They still came on and I shot, I believe twice. It could have been four times. I didn't know at the time who it was I shot.

"I felt that my life was in danger and I shot in self-defense. Before I shot I heard someone in the crowd say, 'Let's get the old man.' Then they came after me."

Two youths who were in the group gave a different version.

Daniel Donnelly, 18, of 1111 Fourth Street Northeast, said he and his companions were going to the party along with Cattuci, who said he used to work there and was invited.

The watchman stopped them at the rear entrance, Donnelly said, and an argument ensued. After a good many harsh words, the group of youths decided to leave and were walking away when the shots were fired, Donnelly asserted.

John Guiffreda, 17, of 760 K Street Northeast, told substantially the same story, but added that Rithman shot when one of the boys blew a horn in front of the building.

A son of the watchman, police said, tried to stop the youths at the foot of the ramp but was unsuccessful. Donnelly said the watchman's son carried a stick and that a fight with him took place before the youths proceeded up the ramp.

Boy's Mother Gravely Ill

Rithman, an official of the automobile company said, has been employed there five or six months. Previously he was watchman at other establishments. He has a wife and five children, the oldest, Charles, a sergeant in the Army.

Kalavitinos is a third-year student at Central High School and works as a mailer and printer's helper at a local publishing establishment. His mother, Mrs. Jennie Kalas, 57, is critically ill at Emergency Hospital with a heart ailment.

Cattucci is a second-year student at McKinley Tech and drives an ice company truck. Caponiti is a third-year student at Anacostia High School.

One of the bullets from Rithman's gun struck the window of a florist shop across the street. It pierced the word "Funeral," written on the window to advertise "Funeral Bouquets."

W. F. Tremper, 24, of 1133 Abbey Place Northeast, who was across the street when the shooting occurred, told police he saw one of the boys rush from the building yelling:

"My God I'm shot! I'm shot! Tremper put the youth into a cab and sent him to the hospital. The two others were taken to the hospital in another cab.

Whether Kalavitinos and Caponiti were shot from the rear could not b edetermined from their wounds. The bullets went through the legs of both and were lost.

The Police Report

Congressman Schulte's committee has made some far-reaching suggestions to the Board of Commissioners as a result of its investigation of the District police. In a few instances the report touches upon personnel problems, but it has not made the mistake of trying to overhaul the police force by legislative edict. Probably the most hopeful note in the report is the statement that "the new Board of Commissioners should be given an opportunity to solve the problem."

Investigations by Congressional committees into the functioning of District agencies can be very helpful. They can reveal, as the Schulte Committee has done in this instance, the shortcomings in municipal service and often point the way to reforms. They can create a proper setting for the enactment of corrective legislation. But no committee on Capitol Hill can run the Police Department. That is the specific task of the superintendent of police, working under close supervision of the Commissioners. The investigating committee has properly pointed out that the Police Department is "weak in its administration and efficiency" and that a "thorough overhauling" is in order. Details as to personnel changes, however, must be left solely to the local authorities.

Little has been said in this inquiry about the demoralizing influence of politics upon the police of Washington. It is nonetheless true that policemen are sometimes lax in their duties because of their fear of offending members of Congress and their friends. Thus the committee appears to have overlooked the baleful influence of politics in a law-enforcement agency when it recommended abolition of civil service tests in connection with the promotion of policemen. Of course, police should be rated in accordance with their ability to enforce the law, but the gate should not be opened to political dictation of promotions.

Most of the legislative changes recommended by the committee are good. A stronger vagrancy law, more expert investigation of all violent deaths by a medical examiner, stiffer penalties for second offenders, an increase in the police force and better training for its members, plus compulsory retirement for policemen over 60, should go a long way toward giving Washington an effective law-enforcement system. The weakest suggestion in the report is that special police paid by private individuals or corporations be given "full authority to maintain law and order." It is all right to designate such special police to protect private property, but certainly no officer drawing his salary from a private source can be trusted to go beyond that function. Protection of the public against criminals is the duty of the District and not of any individual or company. In the interest of winning support for the committee's many constructive recommendations, this proposal ought to be discarded at the outset.

Pensions As Usual

Wanted: Fiscal statesmanship. The sign ought to be hung up in our legislative halls, at least for the duration of the emergency. Let us first look at our fiscal situation. The Treasury has just published a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30 last. Total outlays amounted to $12,710,000,000 (exclusive of debt retirements), with defense expenditures alone amounting to $6,048,000,000, not counting certain additional departmental expenditures attributable to national defense. The result of this huge defense outlay is a deficit of $5,103,000,000, in spite of the fact that net receipts reached the extraordinary high figure of $7,607,000,000. And this, of course, is only a beginning; the tempo of defense spending is being accelerated, and at the end of the next fiscal year a still more imposing deficit will be chalked up. In face of this record the House has voted to pay pensions of $40 per month to all needy World War veterans who served 90 days or more when they reach the age of 65!

The relentless persistence with which the pension grabbers return to the attack is one of the perennially discouraging features of the legislative scene. By degrees they have—with reason, in view of the record—to attain the goal of pensions for all, regardless of need or of service disabilities. When or if that goal is attained, a deplorable precedent will have been set for exacting similar gratuities for those who have been inducted into the present citizens' Army. But these more distant troubles are not so immediately disturbing as the indifference of the House to appeals to keep non-defense expenditures down in order to relieve the terrific strain of unavoidable defense spending. It appears that the measure slipped through with many members unaware of the nature of the bill. That is a poor excuse for dangerously irresponsible legislative conduct. But at least it strengthens the hope that the Senate, having been fully apprised of the character of this House bill, will decisively reject it.

Senatorial Frank

The fact that a few pieces of Senator Wheeler's franked propaganda fell into the hands of soldiers has created a furor. That is not strange, for any attempt to induce drafted men to protest against the course their Government is taking would be, as Secretary Stimson has said, "very near the line of subversive activities against the United States, if not treason." The Senator from Montana has gotten his logic sadly twisted by trying to justify petitions from soldiers to Congress. However, it does not appear that he set out to circularize citizen soldiers as a group.

What is particularly depressing about the incident is that the Senator's right to send out a million pieces of propaganda at public expense seems to be taken for granted. It is true that he paid the cost of the paper and printing. But Uncle Sam furnished $10,000 worth of postage to let a million people know that Mr. Wheeler still clings to his die-hard isolationist views. To say the least, the incident involves a gross waste of public funds. Even more important, it illustrates how flagrantly a legislator may abuse the franking privilege to which Congressmen individually and as a group still cling.

Of course, Mr. Wheeler has a right to shout his sentiments from the housetops in all parts of the country, and no true American wishes to stop him. But the use of public money to spread his propaganda—or that issuing from any other senatorial office—carries special privilege too far. The first action which the incident calls for is a curb on reckless abuse of the senatorial frank.

Slowing Down?

For more than a week the Germans have made no specific claims to territorial gains in the Russian campaign. Neither Leningrad at the north nor Kiev at the south of the vast 1,800-mile front has been captured, though the fall of each has been several times described as imminent. On the central, or Moscow, front the status of Smolensk remains uncertain. The Russians continue to insist that this important city is still in their hands, and this claim now seems far more plausible than when the Nazis announced the capture of Smolensk nine days ago. The probability behind all the contradictory and confusing claims is that the German advance units did penetrate to Smolensk, but were not followed by infantry in sufficient force to occupy it. Whether the penetrating units were actually thrown back by the Reds, or whether they pushed on elsewhere, it is, of course, impossible to say. Indeed, if the answer to this question could be known it might form a basis for a prognosis of the campaign.

The success of the campaign up to this point would seem to depend upon the extent to which Germans have been able to encircle and isolate particles of the Red Army, or to what extent their own advance units are now in danger of being cut off. All that we know is that several segments or "pockets" of Soviet troops are fighting a good many kilometers behind the most advanced German troops. This situation probably characterizes most if not all of the far-flung front. Thus the "slowing down" of the German drive east, indicated in the absence of place names in the German communiques, which has given rise to some reluctant optimism in both London and Washington, may be no more than the pause necessitated for piecemeal destruction of these pocketed portions of the Red army. Yet by German admission some of these forces have been offering "fanatical resistance." And this indicates a considerable strength in both numbers and material. If these Russian forces are strong enough to fight their way through the encircling Germans or to hold out until they are relieved by counterattacks from the east, the whole complexion of the Russian campaign might change—just as the complexion of Hitler's French campaign of 1940 would certainly have changed had Gen. Weygand's vainly awaited counterattack materialized and succeeded.

Russian counteroffensives of this nature developing on a large scale might be a fairly safe index that the German drive had spent its force and was really bogging down. They would indicate that the whole cost of the campaign in men and equipment had been seriously, and perhaps fatally, miscalculated by the Nazi high command. A miscalculation of this sort is not impossible. It seems to have been made, at any rate, in the preparations for the costly victory in Crete. Certainly the element of surprise which operated so much to Hitler's advantage in the first weeks of the Russian war has by now been expended. To be sure, little more could be expected of a successful Russian counteroffensive than to stalemate the campaign, but even this would be tantamount to victory. However, the possibility, in the event of such a stalemate, of a sudden generous peace offer from Hitler to Stalin cannot be precluded from any calculation, notwithstanding the Anglo-Russian covenant against separate peace.

Internal Affairs

Astrology and soothsaying are quite properly classified among the more hazardous occupations. Still a hasty survey of the heavens, a casual poke into the entrails, and a peep or so at the tea leaves are quite enough to convince the unprejudiced observer that almost nothing short of a cosmic upheaval can prevent the Yankees from winning another American League pennant this year. By bowling over the young and redoubtable Mr. Feller the other day, the Yanks have as good as liquidated the Cleveland Indians as a serious opposition. They have won 23 of their past 26 games and are now a good 9 games in front.

There is no indication whatever that they will seriously slacken this pace. At the last semiofficial reckoning they had three regulars and one pitcher, Mr. Ruffing, who were hitting .313 or something considerably better. Two Yankees, Messrs. DiMaggio and Keller, lead the whole league in home runs, and under the considerably more important heading of runs batted in. In the pitching department, to be sure, where the aging Mr. Ruffing, the venerable Senor Gomez and the young newcomer, Mr. Russo, carry most of the burden, the Yanks are much less impressive. But theirs is essentially a slugger's league, and when it has the benefit of bats like DiMaggio's, Keller's, Dickey's and Henrich's, second-rate pitching is quite good enough. Even the Boston Red Sox, with ninth-rate pitching, are, thanks, to the bats of Messrs. Williams, Cronin, Peacock, Foxx and others, firmly established in third place, with something a little better than a Chinaman's chance of finishing behind the winner.

However, the National League is still a pitcher's league, as is illustrated by the woeful skidding of the Dodgers. Just as the folks up in Flatbush were getting excited over the controversy as to whether all or only half the World Series games this year should be played at Yankee Stadium, one of the Dodgers, Mr. Higbe, developed an ailing appendix, Mr. Wyatt a sore arm, and Mr. Fitzsimmons was badly conked on the pitching wrist by a batted ball. To wager one's immortal soul at this point on the prospect of a National League pennant for Brooklyn would scarcely come under the head of a giltedged investment. Troubles of the sort now being endured by the Brooklyn club are known to the trade as "the breaks," and it is well known in and out of the trade that it is the breaks that win or lose pennants. The radiant smile of destiny appears at this moment to be directed upon the St. Louis Cardinals. They have no less than five strong-arm boys hitting well above .300, and their adolescent pitching staff has been something of a sensation. Some professional doubt, however, has been voiced as to whether young and unseasoned pitchers, fortified only by the veteran Mr. Warneke, can hold up under the big strain of the next two months.

This brings us to last year's champions, the Cincinnati Reds, who with perhaps the best pitching department in either league have made a rather lugubrious showing. Some weeks ago the Reds' chances of a pennant were virtually written off by the experts. Until they acquired Mr. Waner the other day, the Reds had not a single .300 hitter on the club, and the team average was .240, or only a few points better than that of the unspeakable Phillies. Lately, however, the Reds have shown some signs of snapping out of it at last. They have overtaken the grandfatherly Giants, who had been comporting themselves with a spryness and vigor altogether unseemly in men of such advanced years. So it is still too early to count the Reds definitely out of the race—especially so, if Messrs. McCormick, Lombardi and Goodman should suddenly remember where they left their batting eyes.

THE BRIDGE
(Paris, 1941)

Along the worn, neglected stone
The victor's banners whipped the sky,
But, spanning years, the bridge is known
Because she passed this way to die.

Her face—a moment's tragic flower
Turned here to watch her burning tower
And Time beheld . . . and kept it so.

Her eyes turned on the flaming town
Their beauty and untamed desire,
Then from this shadowed bridge looked down—
And gave an Age their starry fire.

Time on the ancient bridge will pause
In other years, when we have crossed . . .
And dreams will stand with Time, because

'Tool Of The Axis'

May I offer some observations on your timely editorial, "Tool of the Axis," just published in your valuable paper?

In his speech marking the fifth anniversary of the start of the Spanish civil war, after warning the United States to stay out of the European conflict, Generalissimo Francisco Franco denied any ambition for "domination abroad," meaning, of course, the Western Hemisphere.

This is obviously true. Spain is in no condition at the present time, and for a considerable time to come, to embark on any adventure of conquest or domination. Furthermore, no Spaniard, in his normal state of mind, would like to see his country, already impoverished to the point of starvation, plunged once more into the ravages of a new war more destructive than the old one.

The point is, however, whether Generalissimo Franco would have the power, or even the will, to resist the designs of domination and conquest of his own country of those who are already there by his own invitation.

Prof. Ewald Banse, one of Hitler's geopoliticians, two years before the start of the Spanish civil (sic) war, wrote in his book, "Germany, Prepare for War," these significant words:

"Our first interest must be to make Spain strong again, especially as the Spaniards are among the most delightful and chivalrous people on earth . . . Spain is too weak industrially to support a war out of her own technical resources. Her mines supply her with coal, iron, copper, zinc and other metals, but some of these ores are exported as Spain lacks the means of working them . . . The Spaniards are an indolent and easy-going people, lacking vigorous determination and perseverance. If, however, a Mussolini were to arise among them, the Spanish nation might quite possibly play a part worthy of its past."

Only those entirely blind will fail to see what was in Prof. Banse's mind when writing the quoted lines. As the Spaniards are "an indolent and easy-going people and as they are too weak to support a war out of her own technical resources," therefore, it behooves the Nazis to make Spain strong again in the interest of Germany in the peninsula and abroad.

War Referendum

Mr. Mark Sullivan's article on public opinion polls in your issue of July 20 states convincingly the fundamental objections to government by poll or referendum, and these objections apply with special force to the proposed war referendum. As Mr. Sullivan points out, it is practically impossible to reduce to a simple question, capable of being answered satisfactorily by a "yes" or "no" vote, such complex problems as those involved in the decision between peace and war. It is, however, possible to go into these matters quite thoroughly in committees of the Senate and House and in the debates on the floors of both houses.

The life and death problem facing the democracies is how to maintain and increase their efficiency in order to defend themselves against the autocracies which are able to take the most fateful decisions quickly and secretly. The war referendum, by slowing down the process of decision, by laying open to the enemy all our deficiencies and weaknesses and by promoting internal controversies would gravely weaken us at the precise moment when we most need to be strong.

Lebensraum

Recent events in Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru are a reminder that German designs on South America are no new thing. They are at least as old as Kaiser Wilhelm II. But public memory is short; and I did not see in the recent obituary notices of that monarch in American newspapers any reference to the notorious proposals he made to British statesmen concerning Latin America shortly after the death of Queen Victoria in 1901.

The Kaiser had gone to England to attend the funeral of his grandmother; and at Osborne met Lord Salisbury, prime minister, and Lord Midleton, secretary of state for war, among other ministers. Wilhelm was not on good terms with Salisbury and therefore made his proposal to Midleton, asking him to pass it on to the prime minister The proposal was that England should help Germany to acquire territory in South America where, he stated, Germany already had considerable interest. "England and Germany had an alliance," he went on, "the United States could not prevent him (the Kaiser) from landing an army in South America, since the British fleet would be on Germany's side." "Once the troops are landed," he said, "I will get together a population of half a million Germans and deal with 'the States.'" "You keep 'the States' off me, and I'll keep Russia off you," he concluded.

There is no doubt it was a considered scheme since the Kaiser repeated the proposal to Midleton the following year, when they met at German army maneuvers, and reinforced it with excuses as to Germany's need for space, that "France had expanded in Africa, Russia in the East and England everywhere."

Midleton recorded these details in his memoirs, stating that he passed on the Kaiser's plan to the prime minister who refused to take it seriously and did not even report it to the Cabinet.

The plea of the pressure of Lebensraum, needless to say, had even less basis at that time than since England, Belgium and Holland had, as they still have, far more inhabitants to the square mile than Germany. Not 1 per cent of Germany's population emigrated to her own overseas dominions (they much preferred the United States!). We are apt to overlook the historical reasons why vast overseas territories are in the possession, or under the influence, of the British, Dutch, French, Portugese and Spanish races, and not of the German. The German, though possessing certain excellent qualities e. g. patience and organizing skill, lacks inventive genius, enterprise and initiative. While the German was tamely submitting to his overlords in their quarrels with their neighbors the other races, more adventurous, were risking their lives and fortunes sailing the seven seas and conquering and settling the New World. ERIC UNDERWOOD.
Washington, July 22.

Definition

Totalitarianism is a companionship of barbarian states that are pledged to each other to fight in unison to destroy all democratic states of Europe, the weak and strong alike. After this has been accomplished, the democratic states in the Western Hemisphere can be forced to adhere consistently to the totalitarian economic system.

Sportsmanship

It seems that it will no longer be necessary to supply the Japanese with airplanes, because of the good airplanes which we have supplied them in the past and because of the Japanese factories which we have planned and equipped—but oil is different. Japan, of course, hasn't any oil to speak of, or much of anything else with which to make war, except what the United States and (to a lesser degree) Great Britain have supplied her. We have sent aid in the past—lots of it—but the Japanese have used it up bombing and machine-gunning the Chinese. So, if the Japanese aviators are to have any oil to fight our aviators in a fair combat, we must continue to send oil to Japan as we have in the past and are doing now. Anything else wouldn't be "sporting."

To be sure, we did stop sending Japan scrap iron, but that was because we needed, or thought we needed, the stuff ourselves, and not because we grudged it to Japan. Besides, we have already sent enough scrap iron to Japan to build a magnificent navy which should give an excellent account of itself when it steams forth to do combat with our dreadnoughts. This it may do one fine day, provided we continue to send oil to Japan, which we shall very likely do rather than see this magnificent navy helplessly immobilized in Japanese ports. In any case, we must continue to send oil to Japan so that she will always be properly equipped and fueled and a worthy foe to do battle with us on land and sea and in the air.

This all may come a little hard to us Americans who look forward to a scarcity of gasoline, which may result in gasless Sundays and increased prices for gasoline resulting in part from shipments to Japan. However, what is a little inconvenience, a holiday or two given up, a hot day or two which might have been spent at the seashore or in the mountains compared to living up to American traditions of sportsmanship? We scorn to grumble at such minor privations which we know are necessary in order that our airmen and our seamen may have worthy adversaries with which to do battle in fair and sportsmanlike combat.

HORACE TRUESDELL.

Decentralizing Washington

A step in the right direction was made when the order was given for the Grazing Division of the Department of the Interior to move to Utah. That is where the work of that Government agency can be best done.

Let the good work go on! Now the Farm Security Administration should be moved to the Middle West—the center of the farming industry, and the Railroad Retirement Board to Chicago—the railroad center of the Nation. Where else can these departments perform their functions more efficiently?

The people who would say that this cannot be done are those who for some selfish reason do not wish to move from their homes in Washington. But in this case, the good of the larger number of people should be considered. Washington residents need not fear the result of decentralization, since the defense industries will bring many more workers to the city than the decentralized departments will move away.

It is not only office space that is crowded in Washington, but also rooming houses. The problem of the lack of office space can perhaps be solved by erecting temporary quarters for some departments or by taking over some of the city's apartment buildings for use as office space. But this will not solve the housing problem; it only makes it more serious. Many believe that decentralization is the only sensible solution for this problem, and a large number of Government workers are in favor of the plan. MARY M. MILLS.

The Post Impressionist

Joe's Real Song

There used to be a small gray house near the corner of the road, where on a Sunday afternoon the old gang would gather and go into a songfest. Now songs are wonderful guardians of nature. They either make you feel very low or do their utmost to keep the spirits very high. Of course, most of the ditties we took up had all the air and pomp of happiness.

One of the crowd, if I remember correctly a certain "Joe," always had the inspiration to be a song writer. In those days just as in this the road to song-writing fame was a hard one and one of slim chance. Joe received little encouragement from the gang, but always there was that stony look in his eyes; as though some day he was going to pay off old scores, and come back to this corner and show us a thing or two.

As all good things usually break up, with a pang of stomach sorrow, this little gang grew up and the boys went their way. But Joe stayed in the little town. He bought himself a little piano and plugged away at the keys, tossed tunes into the battered boards, and day after day wrote lines and lines of music. I also stayed in that small town, and having no desire to go to the big city, I used to talk to Joe, and ask him why he didn't try to market some of the music.

He would smile and say, "I'm waiting for a great one." I used to tell him that some day that great one would pop, and he would be sitting on top of the world. But Joe was too enthused. He seemed to be looking for a tune that just wasn't to be found. He almost made it a mystery, and at times, when I would see the pile of manuscripts on the piano top, I would boldly come out and tell him he was wasting his time. But Joe still went at it with a single-aimed desire to ride high on the crest of song popularity.

Then a break came. Joe gave one of his songs to a friend of his who happened to be forming an orchestra. Now, believe me, it was only a small-town get-up; but by hook or crook they managed to get an assignment to a large county dance. The band played the number, and after the first try it became a winner. It wasn't like the ordinary song that was hashed and slashed and finally faded. The music clung to the people's ears, and they hummed, whistled, and the whole community wanted to know who wrote the song. When Joe heard about it he merely laughed. He told me that wasn't the real thing. Well, if it wasn't, I told him, it certainly was a good beginning.

As with all first record breakers this number found its way to a few big bands. There was the copyright, and all that sort of red tape. Of course, Joe took in a lot of money, and bought a new piano. He built himself a studio and started to live the life of an artist. There was no more coolness about Joe, he never thought of that delightful number he was going to manufacture on the keys. As time went on, he became a name in song writing. So much so in fact that I hardly ever had the opportunity to talk to him. When I did try to visit him, I was told that he had left for the big city, and that this town had no more dash for him.

I felt hurt about this and after thinking how much the small town did contribute to his success I thought of him as a traitor. As with all big names, his became a permanent fixture on song sheets, and when I read the big-town papers I noticed that he had married and was settling down and was still recognized as a "great song writer."

About two years later, while standing in front of my place of business, a small group of men walked up to me and asked me if I knew where Joe used to live. I pointed out the house. It had been empty for years. I went on to explain about the little gray house, and how the gang used to meet there on Sunday afternoons, and go into some hearty songfests. It was there he first told us about wanting to write songs. You have to hand it to Joe, he had the stuff. The men shook their heads, got into a huddle, and after thanking me they walked off.

I didn't understand. That is, until a month or two later when I noticed that his house was being taken down. It wasn't being ripped apart, but being broken down carefully as though each board were a prized possession. It seemed funny, and I was going to find out what the procedure meant.

I talked to one of the workmen, but all I got was a growl. As I turned away I bumped smack into Joe. There was the usual shaking of hands and how-are-you chatter, and then recitals of good times. Finally I got to the question, "What are you going to do with the house, Joe?" I asked. "Oh, ho," he laughed, with richness, "I'm going to take it back to the big city; it makes me feel that real urge for music; and, besides, remember that song I was telling you about, the real thing? Well, I think it's in this house and I'm going to take it back to the big city with me and put it right beside my own home." "Then what?" I asked. "Then," he mumbled, "I'm going to look for that real thing . . . my song."

The Bad Priest

From the beginning of time there have been bad men. Among the Twelve Apostles there was Judas. From the beginning of time there have been good men, and among the Twelve Apostles there were the other eleven.

Mr. John T. Appleby, in his review of Dr. A. J. Cronin's book, "The Keys of the Kingdom," in The Washington Post of July 20, thinks that "perhaps the bad priest is too big a character, from a novelist's point of view, to be assigned a minor role."

Perhaps Dr. Cronin felt, when writing a book about the priesthood that the bad priest is too small a character, from anybody's point of view, to be assigned a major role.

Fair Enough

Citizenship Restricted to Natives

JOHN S. KNIGHT, who runs the Detroit Free Press and other papers, rebukes the author of these dispatches for "as narrow a column of six-em thinking as we have read in many a day," the same being a rather ill-written essay on the subject of American nationalism and the naturalization of aliens. He describes as "bitter words" the suggestion that if citizenship were restricted to the native, then, in time, "we should at least be able to conduct an American country by and for Americans only."

PEGLER

Mr. Knight seems to have done this on one of his golfing days, for he didn't put much thought or effort into his lead editorial, preferring, instead, frankly to crib his arguments from a well-known document by Will Irwin. We call that brain-picking in our trade. However, they are good arguments and Mr. Knight might have toiled long and done much worse.

But, on another page of the same issue of his paper, Mr. Knight naively presents some communications which refute his own contention. For these letters include one from the president of the Junior Union and League of Rumanian Societies, another from the president of the Central Committee, representing more than 100 Polish societies, and the third from the secretary-treasurer of the Czech-American National Alliance.

THE COMMENT of the spokesman for the Polish societies is typical of them all. He says it is now proposed to take away from the foreign-born their equality and freedom of worship and speech merely because they were born abroad.

Before proceeding, I should like to point out that no such proposal was made. There was no suggestion that freedom of worship should be curtailed or that equality under the law be thrown out of balance in favor of the native except, only, that the right to vote and hold office be restricted to them alone.

But that response is the gist of all reactions to the merest suggestion that the native be favored in his own land over persons from abroad who become naturalized but continue to regard themselves as Rumanians, Poles and Czechs, for example.

WITH not the slightest bitterness I call attention to the fact that two of these communications come from representatives of organizations calling themselves Rumanian and Polish and the third from the spokesman of a group whose own title admits that it is not wholly American. It is a Czech-American group and the Czech immigrants, after their own tragic experience with their Sudeten-German-Czecho-Slovakians, should be the last to assert their Czechishness in another country of which they are citizens.

As for the Rumanians and Poles who, by their titles, plainly regard themselves as Rumanians and Poles, it may be said without bitterness but, I think, with dignity, that it is impudent of them to claim a voice in the affairs of the United States. This is not Rumania or Poland, but the United States of America.

What purposes do these societies serve which have alien titles but are composed of immigrants enjoying the rights of American citizenship except to segregate their members from the native of the country and retard their assimilation?

THEIR VERY purpose is to preserve a culture and customs which are not those of the United States and thus not only to alienate the immigrant from the native but to set foreign blocs against one another, according to ancient enmities, and to confuse the political decisions of the country. And how does anyone arrive at the belief that it would be a bad thing to run the United States by the will of a homogeneous electorate?

Yet the slightest suggestion that the native may be assumed to be more American than the naturalized immigrant is met by the scornful retort that no real American could entertain a thought so hateful and, as may here be seen, this withering answer comes from organizations which frankly proclaim not to be American or to be, at best, only somewhat so.

BUT IS it hateful to say that Rumanians and Poles are not Americans? Americans do not hate Rumanians or Poles or Czechs, the Irish or the English as such. But the American has a just complaint when persons holding themselves to be foreigners in whole or in part claim the rights of American citizenship, including the right to office here.

It is said that mention of this subject tends to create disunity, but on that point I want to know who is then guilty of the disunity? The natives are and want to be all Americans as, of course, many naturalized citizens do, too. But any country which must fear disunity from foreign groups plainly isn't unified anyway and should consider steps to mend the error of its way.

Japanese Attitude

By Wilbur Burton

Her Special Morality

FIVE YEARS AGO while crossing the Gulf of Chihli from Tientsin to Dairen I drank beer and discussed the world in general and the Far East in particular with K. Kanai—"Tiger" to his fellow Rotarians—who was one of the chief officials of the South Manchurian Railway and a leading Japanese empire-builder in Manchukuo. Two things he said stand out ever more with the passing of the years and the course of the wars they have brought forth.

First, he bitterly condemned the United States for the Asiatic exclusion act, not on the basis that any appreciable number of Japanese immigrants should be admitted to the United States, but because of the principle of racial discrimination involved. This, of course, was not news then—nor is it now—but it must always be borne in mind that here is a traditional Japanese cliche for propaganda on the home front if and when a showdown with United States should come; and it may not be without significance that the recent issue of a popular magazine carried a piece by a pro-Japanese writer which attributed Matsuoka's anti-American attitude to snubs allegedly inflicted upon him when he was a youth in Oregon.

NEXT, Mr. Kanai gave a rather cryptic forecast of Japan's future. "It is interesting to note," he said, "that Japan—a small nation with special morality—has accomplished three major things in the past 40 years. In the first Sino-Japanese war (late in the last century) and again since 1931, we have shown that the so-called 'sleeping dragon' (China) was not merely sleeping, but dying; that despite China's great size and natural resources, she is our inferior. "Second, we defeated Russia, that was supposed to be so powerful. And, third, we successfully defied the League of Nations. What next?"

"America?" I asked somewhat sardonically.

"Perhaps Great Britain," he replied. "What is ordained must happen, but we cannot know what is ordained."

The "dying dragon" has shown signs of life rather painful to Japan since this conversation back in 1936, but the chief implication of Mr. Kanai's forecast has been steadily borne out: Tokyo has ever driven southward in the direction of the colonies of Great Britain or those that she in the pre-Second-World War setup was committed to assist in defending, such as Indo-China and the East Indies.

THERE HAVE BEEN changes in the international situation, but not of Japan's making. China has refused to surrender without a struggle, and Britain's plight on her home front has put it up to the United States how far Japan will be allowed to go otherwise. Washington showed no disposition to intervene insofar as Indo-China was concerned, but there has been considerable evidence of determination to defend the East Indies. And the aid necessary to keep China fighting must now come from the United States, while in 1936 it was the British through Sir Frederick Leith-Ross who were encouraging and assisting Gen. Chiang Kai-shek to the resistance that developed with some Soviet aid into its present proportions the following year.

So in the Kanai scheme of things, Britain and the United States are now to be regarded as one.

And the Kanai scheme of things were—and are—the fundamental Japanese scheme of things as manifested for the past 50 years by every responsible group of Dai Nippon. There have been plenty of differences among these groups, but only over tactics and division of spoils—not over imperialistic objectives. There is not now, and never has been, any appreciable "liberal" group in Japan insofar as being anti-imperialistic is concerned. The most liberal may be best summarized by the professor in Tokyo who outlined to William Henry Chamberlin that Japan should rule everything from Mongolia to the East Indies, adding that some people might call him an imperialist, but he regarded himself as a liberal.

THE PRONOUNCED differences over tactics and division of spoils have created a great misunderstanding abroad— such as that the army was "running amuck" against saner elements. The Japanese spokesmen have, indeed, done their best to encourage such misunderstanding, for it formed a tenable basis to plead for time until the "saner elements" halted the army; the world, said the spokesmen, should be patient, for any cracking down would stiffen the military hotheads." Thus Japan has advanced from the Amur to the Mekong in Indo-China.

The Japanese army did not "run amuck" in 1931, nor has it "run amuck" since. Nor will the navy be "running amuck" if it attacks the East Indies. The army did take things in its own hands in 1931, but only because it was convinced that the foreign office could not achieve by diplomacy the objectives that both branches of the government were agreed upon—the subjugation of Manchuria and the closing of the "open door" there.

In China proper it was the same story: the army moved when the foreign office could not induce the Chiang regime to follow an anti-Western policy that would give Japan hegemony over the country. Recently the foreign office has been trying—peacefully—to obtain Japanese dominion over the vast resources of the Indies.

So far it has failed—but whether the navy runs amuck depends on American atitude or Japanese willingness to risk a showdown with the United States. The naval people are a saner element than the army, but there is no difference of opinion within the government—or without insofar as organized thought is concerned—that the Indies are a part of Japan's ordained "living space."

FURTHER, everything in the last decade has been fully in keeping with all the past of modern Japan. The first assault on China 50 years ago was purely imperialistic. The war with Russia was simply to grab South Manchuria. In the First World War Japan's efforts were directed to grabbing German possessions in the Far East and trying to dismember China by the imposition of the Twenty-one Demands.

Still further, all this has come from federal martial compulsion rather than Marxian motivation. Japan's industry was not developed enough for her own market until some time after the war with Russia, so there was no incentive to seek markets abroad by force of arms. A clearer economic motive might be read into the seizure of Manchuria, but in so far as China proper was concerned, Japan had everything her own way in every trade line she was capable of supplying: no one else could compete with her, thanks to her cheap labor and geographical propinquity. Nor was there room to be gained for colonization.

But it was necessary to control China for advance southward. Here one may find if one wishes an economic motive, but all tariff walls have not been able to keep the Japanese from getting the greater share of all Asiatic trade in lines where they compete. Finally, Japan's own deliberate actions are overwhelmingly responsible for her present economic plight; she would be one of the world's most prosperous countries today if she were at peace.

IT ALL ADDS UP that modern Japan, driven by bushido chauvinism and deliberately fostered overpopulation, has ever been fantically bent on course of imperial expansion over all of east Asia and the western Pacific—the same sort of surge that has characterized Germany during almost the same period. Psychologists could explain it better than economists. And there is every indication, as Henry Adams noted in the case of Germany long before the First World War, that this surge will continue until either triumphant or extirpated.

Japan, to be sure, might at a given time be temporarily directed northward instead of southward. In view of her present difficulties in China, she might be willing to make a deal again—as at the Washington Conference in 1922—that left her in a position for a new future rampage. Or at worst, she would agree to an armistice—such as was granted Germany in 1918.

But she can't be appeased. "What is ordained must happen, but we cannot know what is ordained."

'Putsch' In Bolivia

By Carlos G. Nagel.

Nazi Technique In South America

THE TOTALITARIAN plot in Bolivia has focused the attention of America to that land-locked country located in the heart of South America. The Nazi scheme failed and today German Minister Ernest Wendler is in Antofagasta, Chile, waiting transportation for Germany, persona non grata in Bolivia . . . or anywhere else in America for that matter.

This tentative Nazi "putsch" gives the United States an excellent opportunity to study the technique used by German agents in South America, it is a lesson that should be most valuable in the future.

THE GERMAN minister, Ernest Wendler, had the reputation among the foreign representatives accredited to the Bolivian government of being the most hard-working and active of diplomats. He traveled extensively throughout the country, especially in the rich, tropical section of Bolivia. His numerous staff, very much increased in the last few months, was particularly active in the departments of Santa Cruz de la Sierra and El Beni. There are many German settlers in that section of Bolivia, merchants and small land-owners who always have accommodated themselves to the surroundings and cultivated close friendship with the natives. These Germans are always helpful to the neighbors, generous with their seed and tools and assiduous students of Spanish. The Bolivians like them. In fact they like them much better than the British or Americans who appear only on quick trips as representatives of American or British concerns selling excellent but very expensive merchandise. Contrary to the more prosperous countries of Latin America, Bolivia has no American or British colony and residents of those countries are very few.

The German propaganda agents are careful students of the country and the people. They know that in Bolivia exists discontent among the younger generations; just those who a few days ago initiated the abortive revolution.

THE OLD tune of American imperialism has been played successfully in Bolivia ever since the Chaco war when Bolivia took over some of the Standard Oil of New Jersey property. The totalitarian youth of Bolivia feels that ever since then, and specially in the last year, the United States Government has discriminated against Bolivia when it came to granting loans, credit for acquiring necessary machinery and general mechandise which used to be imported from Europe.

A very important point of course is the deep admiration the Bolivian has for the success of the German military machine. The country has had for many years a compulsory military service and this education, often the only advantage of the lower class, is based on German military regulation system, for the instructors have been Germans. It is very possible to conceive that some of the leaders in the recent uprising could be found among that group of 20 Bolivian officers who returned a few months ago from Italy after a training course in the Italian army, which in turn has had German instructors. To substantiate this possibility we have the news item that identifies Maj. Elias Belmonte, the Bolivian Military Attache in Berlin, as the leader of the revolutionary movement.

The German propaganda machine in South America, claimed by Germans themselves to be more efficient than those which undermined the resistance of Norway, Denmark and Holland, needs a far less fertile soil to spread its seed than the Bolivian land.

THE BOLIVIAN government however, under the recent emergency, has shown a spinal fortitude and energy which has pleasantly surprised its South American neighbors, all of them aware of the steady and thorough Germanic undercover work done there for years. It should be remembered that there is today hardly one country in Latin America that is convinced of the ultimate victory of the democratic forces fighting the totalitarians. What will happen to Bolivia, that tiny country in the midst of South America, if Germany should eventually be able to dictate peace? That's a question more than one Latin-American diplomat in Washington ponders about!

The resolute attitude of Bolivia, confronting the first open totalitarian revolt in the Americas, should be considered as a triumph for democracy. It should be remembered that that country has been considered in the past as one intensely influenced by totalitarians and in which a large percentage of the press was supposed to be governed by naziism. Indeed, what about some of the expressions heard here in the United States by some 30 days flying-around-South-America "experts" who have returned claiming that those countries will be democratic only if and when democracy is victorious, that they will remain friends of the United States only if this country is willing to grant convenient loans?

And here is an interesting angle which was used strongly by the Nazi sympathizers of Bolivia. The United States at the Havana Conference was a signatory to the following resolution:

"To recognize the importance and usefulness for continental defense of the Arica (Chile)-Santos (Brazil) transcontinental railway, through Bolivia, and to recommend to the American nations, especially those directly interested in the project, the advisability of proceeding as soon as possible with the financing of the section still to be constructed."

NATURALLY Bolivia is the most interested country in this project and it is considered almost a national necessity. Peru and Chile also would benefit tremendously from such a railroad which would allow the transportation of merchandise from those countries to Brazil and the Atlantic Ocean, avoiding the long and expensive sea voyage via the Straits of Magellan or the Panama Canal. As a hemisphere defense media this project would also be of importance, considering the vulnerability of the Panama Canal and the lack of navies to protect the tremendous coastline of both the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. In other words, the latter implies the present fact that without proper protection, inter-commerce between the South American nations would be at a standstill in case of a blockade by the Axis governments since there are hardly any overland communications between the nations.

The total coast-to-coast length of the project is about 2,500 miles and a study of it has been made already by two officers of the American Corps of Engineers, as requested by the Export-Import Bank of Washington.

THE NAZIS in Bolivia have claimed that the United States is unwilling to cooperate financially with such a project, that it never will because it is against the interests of American-owned Panama Canal and shipping interests!

All of this should give us here in the States a good idea of how a situation like the recent revolt in Bolivia can originate, how it is prepared by Nazi interests and how thoroughly they go about it.

The Pact

Scene—Any Axis country.

Characters—The Chief, his Minister of State.

Chief—What're you doing in those waste baskets?

Minister—I'm filing 'em away.

Chief—Filing what away?

Minister—Pacts we've signed this week.

Chief—Haven't we any filing cabinets?

Minister—Yes, but they're for things we want to keep.

Chief—What's on the memo pad for today?

Minister (looking at pad)—At 9 a. m. we have a pact to sign. At 10 o'clock there's another pact. At 11 o'clock we sign that pact I spoke to you about last night. At noon there's that new nonaggression pledge. At 1 p. m. there are those three pacts that came in last week. From 2 to 5 we—let me see—oh, yes, more pacts to be signed.

Chief—Nothing of any importance all day, eh!

(The phone rings.)

Minister—I'll see who it is.

Chief—If it's anybody with a pact just say yes and hang it up.

Minister—It's Borloff. He says the treaty you signed and returned to him is not the one he sent you.

Chief (impatiently)—That fellow Borloff is getting too technical. Tell him whatever pact I sent him will have to do.

Minister—But he says it is a nonaggression pact with two other fellows.

Chief—What difference does it make whom a pact is with?

Minister (after arguing on the phone)—He says he still would like the pact between you and his country.

Chief—Tell him a pact is a pact.

Chief—What does he mean "MIGHT!"

Chief—Which whoozis?

Minister—The tall one.

Chief—What about that ten-year pact with the short one?

Minister—You signed that a month ago.

Minister—No.

Chief—I must be slowing up.

Minister—And here's that agreement pledging eternal friendship for what's his name.

Minister—The skinny one with the protruding ears.

Chief—I don't recall any such person, but sign it anyhow. What's all that noise?

Minister—It's a truck backing up.

Minister—Yes, sir.

Chief—Why do they deliver them at the front door? They should be delivered at the ash bin out back.

Minister—They go there AFTER we sign 'em, sir.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Russia, Then Latin America

THE EXTRAORDINARY fury of the current Nazi propaganda against the United States is an interesting development. It indicates that there was something wrong in the accounts of the plan of which so much was heard from so many German sources in the early days of the Russian campaign. Hitler, it was said, would conquer Russia and then propose to make peace with Britain. Though this report was undoubtedly circulated by German agents, and though many well-informed persons took it very seriously, there was always something about the tale which did not carry conviction.

LIPPMANN

It was that since Hitler must know that he could never persuade Mr. Churchill or Mr. Roosevelt to negotiate with him just because he had defeated Russia, there must be more to the plan than had been disclosed. There must be something else Hitler meant to do which he hoped would compel the British and American governments to negotiate. There are reasons for thinking that the outbursts of violence by the Nazi propagandists are in part preparation for the hidden plan and in part an exhibition of rage because Berlin realizes that the American Government has not been caught napping.

THE REAL Nazi plan, it is now obvious, is not to let the west alone, defeat Russia, and then propose peace: the real Nazi plan, in addition to conquering Russia and stirring up trouble in the Pacific, is to use Admiral Darlan and Gen. Franco to strike a tremendous blow at both Britain and America in the South Atlantic and in South America. The Vichy government is to prepare and provide the African base of operations. Gen. Franco is to carry the propaganda war into Spanish-speaking America. Conspiracies, already organized in South America, are to prepare pro-Nazi and anti-American revolutions.

At the proper moment, which would be when Germany is able to disengage forces from the Russian campaign, the Battle of the South Atlantic would be precipitated as suddenly as Hitler's attack on Russia. The Nazis would appear at Dakar, their submarines and radiers and aircraft would range the South Atlantic, and rebellions would break out in the key places of South America. If the campaign was successful, the position of Britain and the United States would be so compromised that a dictated peace, disguised perhaps as a negotiated peace, would perhaps have become a practical possibility.

THERE is really no doubt whatever that this South American campaign is being prepared. The government, as the President and Gen. Marshall and Secretary Welles have indicated, has information which for good reasons, no doubt, it is not yet prepared to disclose in detail. But the sudden and exceptional violence of the Nazi propaganda immediately following the Bolivian affair is probably no mere coincidence. For there is obviously more to the Bolivian affair than has yet been disclosed, much more than Berlin wished to have disclosed at this time.

This whole business is one enterprise, extending from Berlin through Vichy, Madrid and Lisbon to West Africa and then to every capital in Latin America. The enterprise is not fully organized either in West Africa or in South America, and the time to set it in motion is not quite now while Russian resistance is causing such a lot of trouble. North Africa is not altogether under control and the installations there, though they are being made, are not completed. Obviously, the Bolivian affair went off too soon, and the explosion has probably uncovered much that at this moment was to have remained hidden. Hence the ferocity of the Nazi reaction about Bolivia at a moment when, one would otherwise suppose, they had plenty of other things to excite them. It is extraordinary, for example, that they are more exercised about the uncovering of a conspiracy in the Andes Mountains than about the bombing of German cities.

THE CHARACTER of the Nazi attack on the President is in itself strong evidence that there is being prepared an attack via France-Spain-Portugal-West Africa on South America. The Nazi propaganda is making tremendous play of the well-known and unconcealed fact that Mr. Roosevelt, like so many other American Presidents, is a Mason. To those who know something of the politics of Latin countries, the Nazi use of this particular device of propaganda will be a certain sign that they are organizing a new front from France and Spain to South America against the United States. Their propaganda is obviously designed to introduce a religious issue in South America which will disrupt that continent and get the United States embroiled in dangerous factional issues.

All these things lie on the surface. They are impressively confirmed by every piece of information which comes from informed observers in South America and in France, Spain, Portugal, and Africa. After the President's remarks in his recent message, and after the public testimony of Gen. Marshall and the statement of Undersecretary Welles, there can be no doubt that the information in possession of the Government would confirm what can readily be deduced in general terms from what is already publicly known.

69,633 Negroes Serving in Army

Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, at his weekly press conference Thursday, called attention to the fact that there are now 69,633 Negro officers and men on active duty in the various Army Corps areas. Stimson emphasized the figures "because of the criticism which sometimes comes that we are not using them (Negroes) enough."

After the conference the War Department issued a statement showing that, of the 69,633 Negroes in military service, nine were officers in the regular army. There are 227 Negro National Guard officers and 23 Negro Reserve officers, the statement disclosed. This is a ratio of about 266 men to each Negro officer.

Today's News Sidelight

Moscow Is More Densely Crowded Target Than London

In bombing Moscow, German planes have threatened one of Europe's most congested population centers, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"The Soviet Union's crowded capital has more people per square mile than London or New York City," the bulletin says. "The 'average' square mile in London would have, in normal times, 11,850 inhabitants; in Berlin, 12,700; in New York, 24,999, and in Moscow, 38,200.

"London, the world's most extensive city, has a crowded core within a 3-mile radius of Westminster supporting 37,580. But this maximum for London is well below Moscow's average.

"The current congestion of city dwellers clustered around the Kremlin climaxes a rapid growth that began in 1861, when the abolition of serfdom gave Russian peasants for the first time the freedom to move at will from feudal country estates into towns. Then Moscow had barely 380,000 inhabitants. By 1897 it had more than a million, by 1915 nearly two million.

"Since the World War and the revolution gave the Russians their 'mother Moscow' as a capital again, the city's population increased, prior to the 1939 census, to 212 per cent of the 1915 figure. In the same period the area expanded only 166 per cent. The closely packed metropolis covers about 113 square miles, to New York's 299 and London's 692. By November, 1940, the population had reached 4,342,000. The rate of population increase had outstripped the expansion of 'living space' by 56 per cent.

"This very congestion has inspired measures which have been cited as possible sources of safety in a bombing raid. New housing has taken the form principally of tall apartment buildings of reinforced concrete, offering more bomb-proof protection than single dwelling units. Traffic jams necessitated an elaborate plan for underpasses at street intersections and tunnels under large open squares, which might supplement the city's much-talked-of subways as air raid shelters.

"Moscow has not mushroomed alone, however. Of the Soviet Union's 20 largest cities, 10 reported a rate of population increase larger than Moscow's."

Va. Deadline Nears On Filing Pay Roll Tax

Richmond, Va., July 25 (AP).—An estimated 8,050 employers in the State subject to the Virginia unemployment compensation tax must file their pay roll tax return for the second quarter of the year by July 31 to avoid assessment of penalties UCC Chairman Edwin S. Reid said today.

All employers of eight or more persons for at least one day in each 20 different weeks in a year are subject to the tax unless specifically exempted by law.

The Gallup Poll

Majority in "Who's Who" Survey Approve Separate Air Force; 27% Are Undecided

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J. July 25.—Whether America should have an independent Air Corps headed by a separate Cabinet department, or continue with Army and Navy air sections as at present, remains a subject of debate in official Washington and in the American press.

While the general public has yet to hear all the arguments pro and con, the opinion of at least one relatively well-informed group of citizens has apparently been thrown on the side of a separate Air Corps. A survey of representative groups of men and women listed in "Who's Who in America," familiar red book of American achievement in many fields, shows those with opinions about 2 to 1 in favor of a new air establishment.

27% Are Undecided

Educators, scientists, engineers, business men, political leaders and others in "Who's Who" were asked:

"A bill has been introduced in Congress to provide for a separate national air force under a Secretary of Military Aviation. Do you think Congress should pass this bill?"

The answers of those in the cross-section were:

Favor Separate Air Force	49%
Oppose Separate Air Force	24
Undecided	27

Many of those replying to the question said they would be cautious about advocating a change of policy until they heard more evidence, however. The 27 per cent who said they were "undecided" or "without a definite opinion" make one of the largest "no opinion" votes ever recorded for "Who's Who" voters.

Comments Clash

Each respondent was invited to discuss the reasons for his particular view, and the resulting comments give a good picture of the clashing ideas involved.

Those favoring a separate Air Corps emphasized the view that American air power would proceed faster; that administration would be in the hands of officers with special training in the air; that British experience with the separate R. A. F. argued for the change.

"Air leaders must be air-minded," said a Midwestern engineer. "The Army is too 'earthy,' and there's too much 'water thinking' in the Navy."

But comments on the other side—from those favoring retention of the twin branches—were just as direct. Some of them were:

"We don't need another Cabinet department; we need coordination of what we've got."

"Such a system would only divide responsibility. Look at what happened in Crete, when the R. A. F. decided to pull out."

"Why not have a Secretary for Tanks—and one for Hand Grenades?"

Defense Touch Noted At Luncheon Affair

Guests Sense Broad Significance Of Party Honoring Mrs. McAllister And Mrs. Douglas at Shoreham

By Patricia Grady

"What a wonderful way to start out the women's national defense program," said an enthusiastic guest to Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, cohostess at the luncheon which she and Mrs. May Thompson Evans gave at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. Thomas McAllister and Mrs. Melvyn Douglas. And though Miss Fleming protested that it was only a social luncheon for her house guest, Mrs. Douglas, and Mrs. McAllister, her guests could see it in a broader significance.

For the conversation around the water-lily-decorated table centered on what had been accomplished at the Thursday meeting at the White House of the Civilian Participation Committee, of which Mrs. Douglas and Mrs. McAllister are members. And leaders in forming the public opinion of women throughout the country were present to discuss with them means of accomplishing unity of purpose and implementation behind the national defense effort. To give the honored guests the greatest possible chance to exchange views with the guests, they started out the luncheon sitting at the two ends of the horseshoe table and changed between courses, with their hostesses at the head of the table and centrally placed guests sitting at the side wings.

Miss Fleming and Mrs. Evans received with their nonor guests in the Garbo room before the group sojourned to the dining room. Mrs. Evans, who headed the line, had pinned a corsage of butterfly orchids to her navy blue dress and wore a navy hat trimmed with fan-pleated white grosgrain. Next in line was Mrs. McAllister, who wore a flower-trimmed beige hat, beige dress and a corsage of gardenias. She told friends that she was leaving for her home in Michigan after the party. Mrs. Douglas, Helen Gahagan to stage and screen fans, topped her red and white print dress with a veil-swathed white picture hat and tucked a corsage of gardenias in her belt, and Miss Fleming set a tiny navy skull cap on her red hair which matched her filagree-braid trimmed navy dress.

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, who was in a dark jacket-print, arrived with her assistant, Miss Mary LaDame. Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, wearing a blue-gray print and navy-trimmed white hat, was making plots and plans to accept Mrs. Douglas' invitation to come to California. "I've planned to go to California three times now—the first time on my honeymoon—and I've never gotten there yet," said Mrs. Wickard. "However, I hope we can take a trip there this fall."

Mrs. Douglas Entertained By Mrs. Harold Ickes

Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who entertained Mrs. Douglas at dinner last night, sat next to Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Two hats, the tulle-veiled, rose-trimmed green one of Mrs. Paul McNutt and the stunning large red one of Mrs. Josiah Bailey, nodded at each other across the table. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, whose second novel, "The Good Neighbor Murder," will appear on the bookstands Monday, chatted with Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, another member of the Civilian Participation Committee. Mrs. Raymond Lee, head of the Women's Volunteer Service Organizations, discussed what her group was doing with Mrs. Wayne Coy and Miss Craig McGeachy of the British Embassy staff exchanged stories about England with Mrs. Gahagan Walker, Mrs. Douglas' sister. Mrs. Walker, a New York insurance broker, left with her sister to spend a few days at Lake Morley, Fairleaf, Vt., last night. From there she will return to New York while Mrs. Douglas comes back to Washington for a day's visit Wednesday or Thursday. From here, Mrs. Douglas will go back to her Hollywood home.

Others there were Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who returned this week from a visit on Long Island and will be on her way again the first of next week; Mrs. Luther Johnson, wife of the Representative from Texas, who was having a hectic time rounding up honor guests and hostesses to bid them adieu; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, looking enviably cool in a white dress with full-hanging pleated sleeves; Mrs. Thurman Arnold and Mrs. Emil Hurja, in green and white and blue and white prints, respectively; Mrs. Claude Pepper, matching her eyes with a wide horsehair hat of the same blue; Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, in a chic purple ensemble, and Mrs. Izetta Jewell Miller and her daughter, Miss Izetta Jewell, jr., who is appearing this week at the Crossroads Theater in "Private Lives."

Many Others Also Present

Also present were Mrs. Walter Bachrach, Miss Lavina Engle, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, in a pert white-tasseled hat; Mrs. Lee Miller, who had far-sightedly brought along a fan; Mrs. Barnet Nover, in a wide-brimmed navy hat; Mrs. Frances Satterfield, up from Richmond, Va., for the affair; Mrs. Frank Waring, in a beplumed white hat, and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

Other guests were Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, who discussed music with Mrs. Helen Moodie, a singer herself; Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Mrs. Clifford Durr, Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Latvian Minister, who wore a pastel blue dress which she topped with a smart matching hat; Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Miss Bess Furman, Dr. Mary H. S. Hayes, Miss Virginia Price, Miss Mae Oliver, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Mrs. Read Wipprecht, a cousin of Mrs. Douglas; Mrs. Clara Beyer, Mrs. Henry Deimel, Miss Katherine Blackburn, Mrs. John Kee, wife of the Representative from Virginia; Mrs. James A. Hoyt, Mrs. Joe E. Blythe and Mrs. George Maurice Morris.

Still others were Mrs. Harold Buckley, Mrs. Walter Pick, an aunt of Mrs. Douglas; Miss Elizabeth Terry, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, in a wide-brimmed red hat; Mrs. Clifford Durr, Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, wife of the Representative from Nebraska; Mrs. John K. Slear, Mrs. Edward Rosenbaum, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, wife of the Representative from Texas, and Mrs. Jewell Swofford.

Society Dances At Chevy Chase

Diplomats and social lights danced on the pleasant terrace of the Chevy Chase Club Thursday evening but the cynosure of all eyes was one Robert Montgomery—wearing that grin which is familiar to moviegoers. He was with a large party.

Center of attention at a merry party were the British Minister and Mrs. Nevile Butler, who have been feted at a round of farewells as they are leaving shortly to return to England. Mrs. Butler, who seemed to favor Strauss waltzes, wore a red and white printed frock cut on simple lines.

Miss Macgregor Engaged to Wed Capt. C. H. Dyson

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Macgregor of Bronxville, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Helen Macgregor, to Capt. Charles Henry Dyson, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Lawrence Dyson, of Englewood, N. J.

Miss Macgregor was educated in Australia and Canada, where her father was stationed for eight years before his appointment by the Australian Government as Trade Commissioner in the United States.

Capt. Dyson, a former reserve officer, attended Columbia University and Pace Institute. He was called to active service in the United States Army and is now in the office of the Secretary of War. He is a member of the Army and Navy Club and the University Club of Washington.

Toivolas Give Cocktail Party

Urho Toivola, the Counselor of the Finnish Legation, and Mme. Toivola entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon between 6 and 8 at their Georgetown home.

Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Temple Joyce, Risto Solanko, of the Finnish Legation, and Mme. Solanko, she in a blue and white print and white hat; Mr. and Mrs. Sven Dahlman, of the Swedish Legation, both tanned from a stay at their country home on the Potomac (she in a gray jacket frock and wide-brimmed navy hat); Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ramo, of New York, who are house guests of the Toivolas. Mr. Ramo is the head of the Finnish information center in New York, and they will return there tomorrow.

Mme. Erkki Mikkola, wife of the Secretary of the Finnish Legation, assisted the hostess. She was gowned in black and white print accented with a red belt. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Saugstad, she in a turquoise frock and navy hat; deep in conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Livesey.

Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gutheim, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Deimel, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittimore, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Higgs, and several dozen others.

French Attache Will Leave Today On Short Vacation

The Assistant Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Lieut. Charles-Henri de Levis Mirepoix, and the Marquise de Levis Mirepoix will leave today for a fortnight's vacation. During their absence their home here will be occupied by James Douglas, who recently came here from California to work for the OPM. Mr. Douglas will give a "housewarming" today for some of his friends.

Another recent arrival in Washington is Elwood Williams, here from Winnipeg to take over a post in the State Department. With Don Purvis, one of George T. Summerlin's aides in the Protocol Division, he has rented an old mill on the Virginia estate of Mrs. Dorothy Radford.

Mrs. Shouse Gives Concert Party

Mrs. Jouett Shouse entertained at a concert party last evening for the Starlight Chamber Music performance at Meridian Hill Park. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

Others who attended included Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richards, Miss Mary M. McQuade, Miss Sylvia Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wyckoff, Horace Peaslee, Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, Miss Grace Dunham Guest, Miss Mary Millard, Miss Emily Millard and Miss Mary Ware Goldman. On Thursday Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whitall entertained a group of friends at luncheon in honor of members of the Perole Quartet, which played last night.

The concert Tuesday night was attended by many well-known persons. Among them were the Mexican Ambassador and his family.

Guest–Brown Nuptials Held

The new Post Chapel at Fort Sill, Okla., was the scene last evening of the wedding of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Brown, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Wyburn Dwight Brown, and Lieut. James Willard Guest, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Harvey Guest, of St. Louis.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a full-skirted gown of white organdy fashioned with a basque bodice and a long train under a veil of illusion which was held in place by clusters of organdy. Her old-fashioned bouquet was of butterfly orchids, blue forget-me-nots and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Bethea, of Fort Sam Houston, wore a white organdy dress trimmed in circular ruffles, a matching bonnet and carried a bouquet of pink rubrum lilies. The bridesmaids, Miss Janet Rodes, of Fort Riley; Miss Doris McCallam, of Fort Sam Houston; Miss Peggy Guest, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mary Joe Wynne, Miss Ann Sherburne Rolfe and Mrs. R. L. Shoemaker, jr., all of Fort Sill, wore ensembles like that of the honor attendant.

Lieut. J. W. Walters, jr., served as best man and the ushers were Capt. W. M. Connor, Lieut. C. H. Anderson, Lieut. S. C. Scott, Lieut. J. L. Stephens, Lieut. R. L. Shoemaker, jr., and Capt. Stacy W. Gooch.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Officers Club. After the reception the young couple left on a trip to Colorado. They will make their home in Fort Sill.

The bride attended H. Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, and her husband was graduated from the University of Missouri and studied law at Washington University in St. Louis.

Miss Stevenson Becomes Bride At Takoma Park

In a setting of white gladioli and fern, Miss Marguerite Susan Stevenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Stevenson, of Takoma Park, Md., became the bride yesterday afternoon of Dwight Voerkoper, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Voerkoper, of Chevy Chase, Md. The Rev. R. Paul Scheerer officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white marquisette fashioned with a Peter Pan collar, long full sleeves with lace inserts and a lace-trimmed bouffant skirt. A fingertip veil of tulle fell from a matching halo trimmed in rosebuds and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Bernice Stevenson, her sister's only attendant, was dressed in orchid tulle, made like the bride's gown. She wore a matching face veil which was held in place by an orchid halo and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Allen Black served as best man and the ushers were Frank Stevenson, a brother of the bride; Lee Adkins, of Snow Hill, Md.,; Charles Cook and Hart Keeler, of New Jersey.

The bride's mother had chosen a street-length frock of pink lace with which she wore navy accessories and a navy straw hat. The mother of the bridegroom wore a flowered print, white accessories and a white hat.

The couple left for a short honeymoon at Virginia Beach. When they return they will make their home on Riggs Road, Hyattsville, Md.

The bride was graduated from the University of Maryland, where she was a member of Delta Delta Sorority, and the bridegroom attended George Washington University.

Scouts to Lead Flag Ceremony

Girl Scout campers from Fort Dupont will conduct a patriotic ceremony at the flag-lowering at "Treasury House" in the square opposite the Willard Hotel at 5:25 p. m. Monday.

Pat Purcell, of Troop 82, will give a brief talk outlining the origin and history of the American flag. Mary Leonard, of Troop 106, and Pearl Armiger, of Troop 69, will recite patriotic poems.

Mary Logan, Troop 6; Carlina Mitchell, Troop 120; Jean Robinson, Troop 114; Doris E. Battist, Troop 115, and Mozelle Bigelow, Troop 90, will form the color guard.

The ceremony will open with the pledge of allegiance to the flag, followed by the singing of "America the Beautiful." Before the flag is lowered, the girls will repeat the Girl Scout promise in unison.

Miss Gwen Hurd, field adviser on the local Girl Scout staff; Mrs. Lee Caldwell, camp director at Fort Dupont, and Mrs. Lorin Armiger and Mrs. H. L. Welsh, counselors at the camp, arranged the ceremony.

Girl Scouts, of Troop 42, Takoma Park, with their leader, Mrs. W. B. Brown, will take part in the ceremony.

Michigan's Cherry Festival Described by Mrs. Vandenberg

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, popular wife of the Senator from Michigan, was among the distinguished guests at the recent Cherry Festival in her State, over which Senorita Christina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, presided. Mrs. Vandenberg is a former newspaperwoman and has written an account of the ceremonies in which Washington society will be very much interested. So this column on The Post society page is gladly turned over today to energetic Hazel Vandenberg, whose contribution follows:

It was my great privilege to participate in a small degree in what I think was a very practical demonstration of the good neighbor policy. And I was very proud that our State should be a leader in this type of Pan American friendliness.

Thanks to our clever Washington representative of the State press, Mrs. Esther Van Waggoner Tufty, sister of the Governor, the idea was evolved this year to make the National Cherry Festival an international affair. With the cooperation of a "member of my family," an invitation was extended to the daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, Christina Michels, to be the cherry queen. An enthusiastic acceptance came from her father, the Ambassador, as well as her mother, Senora Michels. So it was a real family affair.

Chilean Envoy Works Hard

Many were the details entailed in bringing these distinguished guests to Michigan. But the interest and cooperation of our Government made possible a very correct retinue, for an Army captain and a lieutenant commander of the Navy were appointed as aides. The group was royally entertained in Detroit, where a full military salute was accorded the Ambassador at the Government airport celebration. Trips through the main automobile factories, a luncheon at one of the large clubs—all this en route to Traverse City, where the party arrived by Government plane.

At the opening breakfast one could not have gathered a more distinguished group of guests. In fact, this was true of each of the following dinners and luncheons. At this function, Eugene B. Elliott, State superintendent of public instruction, acted as toastmaster.

Here may I digress a little to give you a pen picture of Chile as contrasted with the United States, and some of the highlights of the Ambassador's career. Chile has a population just about equal to that of Michigan, but it covers eight times our area. It fringes down the western coast of South America to the very tip, averaging 100 miles in width and 2,600 miles in length—a distance equal to that from Portland, Me., to Portland, Oreg. Its climate, minerals, agricultural products, are all very similar to our State. So it seemed particularly fitting that a representative from a great country the farthest south in America should come to a great State, the northernmost in our country. And not only was the queen a really regal, yet charming young woman, but her father and mother fitted into the picture as naturally as old friends, though it was their first "peek" into this part of the world.

Ambassador Is Former Mining Engineer

Ambassador Rodolfo Michels is no career diplomat. This is his first diplomatic post, so his attitude was just like that of a tremendously interested sightseer. In Chile, the Radical Party does not mean what it does here. It is a large political party of many years' standing with really progressive principles. The ambassador was originally a very successful mining engineer, but was called first to what would be our House of Representatives, then to the Chilean Senate. Their term is for eight years, and he was just rounding out his first term when the President of Chile, a close friend, Pedro Aguirre Cerda, appointed hi Ambassador to the United States just last fall. Inasmuch as the whole family has visited often in the States, and all speak English fluently, they were delighted at the appointment.

Makes Many Speeches As 'Father of Queen'

In his profession as a mining engineer, the ambassador had come to know many of our leading engineers, and was thoroughly familiar with the various engineering schools, among them our own university. Even now their son is studying this profession at a college in the States. And, too, the ambassador was Chilean commissioner at the New York World's Fair in '39. And a delegate to the consultative meeting of American foreign ministers at Havana in 1940.

The number of times the Ambassador was called upon to speak during the festival seemed not at all a strain either upon his good nature or upon his ability to find a new theme. I think as the father of the queen, he certainly added a tremendous value to the international picture. And to have given up over three days of his valuable time during these critical days proved his earnest desire to cooperate in strengthening the friendly bond. For not only did he make a splendid talk at that opening breakfast, but he spoke over the radio (short wave broadcast to South America) twice, at the dinner at which Senator Prentiss Brown presided, at the luncheon for the Governor, and at the coronation of the queen. And every time he had something really worth while to say in that delightfully pleasant manner that charmed all his listeners.

Miss Michels Wears Overalls

Even when he saw his daughter dressed in firemen's overalls, cap and bandanna, sitting in the cab of the engine about to pull out with the first load of cherries, he seemed entirely equal to the occasion. And always dainty, petite Senora Michels, when called upon to make a bow, would smilingly respond. She was the essence of chic, and looked far more like a sister than the mother to the queen. Her enthusiasm at the kindly way everyone treated her in the United States was certainly spontaneous.

The round of festivities planned for the queen was simply breathtaking, but not once did she falter or even intimate that she might be tired. Three times she, too, was called upon to broadcast over short wave to South America. The evening of the dinner in her honor and her court of ten very attractive girls chosen to represent surrounding towns, I was in the room when they were rehearsing for the broadcast. (Lieut. Comdr. Murray and I had to pick two as ladies in waiting, and we were looking them over.) Christian was teaching the group a phrase in Spanish, meaning "Greetings to South America." Patiently she said each word, having them repeat it, then the phrase together, until she had them very well trained.

I've never seen a complicated program handled so efficiently in all my life. It's a matter of the whole town working and cooperating like clockwork. Such civic pride just doesn't happen—it's a matter of long-time education.

International House Outing Set For Tomorrow

An all-day swimming and picnic outing on a farm near Spencerville, Md., is planned by 30 members of International Student House for tomorrow.

The 26-acre farm on the Patuxent River, which was presented to International Club last September by Mrs. Bancroft Davis, will be used for student conferences when the club has raised funds to equip the building.

Mrs. Davis five years ago gave the house at 1708 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, which today forms the headquarters of the club, to the American Friends Service Committee for the use of foreign students.

Members of International House will go on a Potomac cruise tonight. The committee arranging both these outings consists of Emilio Espiritu, chairman; Nancy Parker, Virginia Herring, Marie Trammel and Ross Burnett.

2 to Represent Sodality Union

Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the Sodality Union of Washington, and Miss Mary Walsh, chairman of the literary committee, will go to Pittsburgh August 1 for an "All-Union Day" August 3 at the Summer School of Catholic Action.

Activities of the Washington union will be displayed through movies shown in the evening after the conference, Mrs. J. A. Egan, publicity chairman, said yesterday. Work in Washington will be further publicized by posters which are now being prepared, with pictures of rural school work and Catholic instruction in several Washington public institutions, Mrs. Egan said.

The sodality's part in the national defense program, in cooperation with the United Service Organizations through the National Catholic Community Service, will be a major subject of discussion in which Washington delegates will take part.

Other representatives of the Sodality Union here will join Miss Mattingly and Miss Walsh for the trip, Mrs. Egan said.

Lippmanns to Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann will leave in a few days for Bar Harbor, where they have leased Old Point for the late summer season.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THIS WILL BE a gay weekend in Warrenton with the Leny Manor Horse and Pony Show starting this morning and lasting all day. There are well over 200 entries, and post entries will be accepted up to the last minute. Among those showing will be Mrs. George Watts Hill, Mrs. James Hamilton, Linden Lane Farm, Edgewood Farm, C. Oliver Iselin 3d, Fenton Fadeley, George Rexrode, Foreman Dirickson and many others.

The entertainment committee has arranged to have gay umbrellas set on the grounds where luncheon will be served. Among those assisting in serving will be Miss Mary Owen Lyon, Miss Betty Lyon, Miss Natalie Roberts, Mrs. Marshall Wallach and Miss Madaliene Drake. Committee members are Miss Virginia Calvert, Miss Sarah Warren and Miss Betty Charrington. The judges are to be Miss Bruce Bowes and Miss Jane Cone, of Richmond, who are house guests of the Misses Virginia and Jane Calvert, and Frank Christmas, of Washington.

THE YOUNG exhibitors will compete for two cups this year. One is the Pony Championship Plate, presented by Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, in memory of Victorian 2d, the pony that was champion of the Leny Manor Show for five years. The other is a bowl presented by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. O'Keefe, to be given the child showing the best sportsmanship.

A horse show dance will be held at the Blue Parrott this evening after the show, with the proceeds of both the show and the dance going to the Fauquier County Tuberculosis Association.

Many parties are planned for this afternoon and evening for the visitors expected in Warrenton over the week end.

MRS. NATHANIEL H. MORISON, president of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club, entertained members Wednesday afternoon at her home, Welbourne. After the meeting "to plan war work," tea was served. Among the guests were Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard, Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, Mrs. Henry Fairfax, Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, Mrs. Charles Hill Jones, Mrs. Arthur C. Marshall, Mrs. Southgate Morison, Mrs. George Slater, Mrs. William Slaughter, Mrs. John Cochran, Mrs. William Clifford, Mrs. Warner Snider, Mrs. Charles F. Harrison, Mrs. Thomas Fendall, Mrs. E. B. After Loveless Childhood, Two Unfortunate Love Affairs and Unhappy Marriage, Woman Loses Zest For Living; Chronically Tired, She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have had a lot of trouble, all my life. During childhood, I had a loud, fighting stepmother who made our home a hell. After two unfortunate love affairs, I married, and it was followed by divorce. Marriage was a nightmare to me, but I struggled longer than most women would, hating to relinquish what little love I had ever found.

It looks as if I might have been to blame, since it is unlikely that one person would have so many undeserved failures chalked against them; and you may think I magnify my misfortunes in my own mind. Yet, anyone who knows me will say, "If anyone deserves a break, Grace does. She has had one blow after another; and now her child is sick most of the time, and she is not well herself." Everyone I know tries to help me and be nice to me, but sometimes I feel I cannot carry on much longer. I am tired so much; not depressed, ever; just tired and highly nervous, in a controlled sort of way.

Am I the victim of an unhappy childhood,—the poison from which is discoloring my whole life? Doctors probably would call me neurasthenic, or something like that. I have already been to three doctors, but they seem to beat about the bush, even though I try to help them diagnose my condition, by giving them all the information I can. I don't know of anything I should weed out, in the way of a "complex," to help my peace of mind. I don't seem to be afflicted with hate, or even an inferiority complex. My only "complex" might be a desire for love, which it has never been my luck to have. I never had it as a child, and I failed to find it in marriage.

There seems to be nothing doctors can do to help me, and I wonder if you will be kind enough to give me your opinion of the situation. Perhaps you can suggest someone to whom I could appeal for guidance in getting straightened out. GRACE J. T.

How to Get Rid Of Psychic Depression

DEAR G. J. T.: Your unhappy, love-starved childhood undoubtedly explains your two unfortunate love affairs and subsequent mistaken marriage. And your constant tiredness is a typical manifestation of psychic depression, occasioned by chronic lack of love; a lack which, in turn, is likely to beget, in the feminine nature, the condition of "emotional frigidity," wherein the very power to love is blocked of expression by inhibitions and repressions engendered by mistreatment at the hands of others. Also, emotional frigidity may develop as a result of prudish mis-education concerning the facts of life (and not necessarily from lack of family affection), to envelop its victim in an aura of pallid gloom. So it appears you may be hemmed in on all sides with factors contributing to a "vicious circle" brand of neurasthenia.

It further appears that you possess greater insight into the nature of your difficulty than did any of the three doctors you consulted. One must hold them guilty of ignorance or indifference, or both. Yet, their individual failure to cope adequately with the case should not discourage you from continuing to look to men of science for aid and guidance in solving the problem. However, you cannot look to any party of the second part to take the lead in, or assume the whole burden of, curing your depression; nor to procure any miraculous overnight improvement. It happens to be your life that is involved,—and as such, it is essentially and infinitely more precious to you than to anyone else.

You must recognize and accept your responsibility to be purposeful, indefatigable, intelligently selective and indestructibly optimistic in collecting all information, aid and suggestions which may be fashioned into a ladder by which you can climb upward out of this Slough of Despond into which you have sunk by slow degrees. You must realize that the business of building the ladder and rightly using it is your assignment. It cannot be delegated to another. Nobody—doctor, psychiatrist or psychological consultant—can make you his life work to the extent of putting together that ladder for you and hoisting you up it on his shoulders.

Or, to state the proposition another way, your task consists in "out-living" your childhood handicaps. So, first of all, you need understanding counsel in getting that long-delayed project under way. You need to know what specific misconcepts of self and of life you hold, such as betrayed you into two unfortunate love affairs and an equally unfortunate marriage. You may need medical help in reinvigorating your physical self.

Despite disappointments and difficulties, you must persist until you have found and assimilated such assistance of this sort as will establish a feeling of self-confidence and a sense of direction, and then you will be adequately equipped to strike out bravely (with some promise of success) for a new try at happiness in the realm of heterosexual love. You will be in the position of knowing (1) what you need and want that you would benefit from having, and mean to have; (2) what you must be prepared to contribute to life in order to attain these objectives, and (3) how to recognize and avoid synthetic (and self-betraying) substitutes, such as you have grabbed at to your detriment before.

As for whose guidance to enlist, in undertaking to retrain yourself for living, if you will telephone me (National 4200, Branch 343) I shall give you the names of both a psychiatrist and a general practitioner, the latter of whom is a diagnostician possessing psychiatric insight into such ailments as yours. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Colored Hose Make Necessary Beauty Regimen for Legs

By Carolyn Abbott

FASHION'S latest whimsey—colored stockings and sheerest black ones—may be a "must" style by fall. If so, all eyes will be focused on legs. This calls for concentration on learning to walk gracefully, to stand well, to have good seated posture, to slim an ankle or to fill out too skinny calf muscles.

Stockings in shades of wine, dark subtle greens, grays, as well as vivid Kelly green tones, electric blue, navy, smoky gray-blue, cyclamen, platina, rich copper, ruby red (yes, ruby red!) and olive green are in the offing for autumn. Keyed to your basic costume or accessories, either matching or contrasting, they accent the legs.

Although colored hosiery are a high fashion in New York, latest reports from the local stores indicate that the more conservative Washington women are buying mostly sheer black stockings. A few daring souls venture to buy the bright colored ones. Yet, if color you will have, consider these bright shades. But first consider your legs.

Here are some of the combinations worked out by the fashion designers: Famous Jo Copeland introduces nutria stockings to match three nutria buttons on a short taupe jacket of soft wool. And she shows wine stockings with a wine suit of rough wool.

Nettie Rosenstein puts ruby red stockings on a model who wears a double-breasted fall suit of ruby red wool. Also, in her collection, olive green stockings are worn with a blue, green and fuchsia silk dinner dress.

Match or Contrast

Fira Benenson uses accessory-color stockings either to match or as a contrast to the costume—always keyed to the accessories. With a taupe jersey two-piece suit, she combines a taupe taffeta plaid hat and scarf, black alligator bag and shoes, black suede gloves and sheer taupe stockings in a much darker tone than the dress.

With black dresses, sheer black stockings are worn.

To wear these bright-colored stockings successfully, your legs must be shapely, well-proportioned and free of superfluous hair. Use a razor or depilatory at least once a week. "Nair," a new cream one, is scentless, mild and does wonders toward removing fuzz on the legs.

Dimensions for the perfect legs are: Hips, 34½ inches; thighs, 21 inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8 inches. If your legs measure up to the above dimensions, colored stockings will hold no terror for you. If not, revive those leg and ankle exercises you've discarded.

First of all, don't forget that walking in low heels makes muscles long and slender, and high heels tend to make them bunchy.

To Develop the Calf

You can develop the calf by standing, with your feet turned outward, and slowly raising up on toes and down again. Walking around the room on your toes, helps too. Also, it's good for your posture.

Strengthen your ankle by sitting down and moving the ankle in a circle.

For weak arches you can take a couple of soda water bottles and roll them back and forth under your arches as you hold to chairs on either side of you.

With your legs encased in stockings keyed to your costume, you'll be more conspicuous than ever. Therefore, remember to stand with weight on both feet and with feet close together; to take medium-length steps—not long, mannish strides, or worse yet, little mincing, teetering steps.

Also, never sit with feet crossed at the ankles. Don't sit with knees apart. Cross your legs above the knee, for it is ageing and awkward to cross them below.

Sleeve Effect In New Capes

Hollywood, Calif.—No woman seems happy these days unless her clothes "look like what they ain't." First, no woman was happy until she had changed all her coats for capes. Now they want the capes to look as if they had sleeves. We've seen two of these optical illusions recently. One, designed for Gloria Swanson to wear, is made of black and white checked wool, trimmed all around with black velvet. Cape is quite narrow, about sleeve length, falls from the shoulder in folds that look, at first glance, like sleeves. Gloria wears it with a slim skirt to match, black blouse and accessories.

Another of these capes cut to look like coats is made of white ermine. We went fur-coat shopping with Lucille Ball one day last week and she tried it on. It's bolero length, ties on with wide bands of ermine—and you'd swear it had three-quarter sleeves. Tricky—and new.

PLEASANT HOMES

Home Tasks Aid War Time Morale

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WHERE do people in war-torn countries find the courage to go on living? How can they bear the terrible hardships they're called upon to endure?

Well, a friend of ours has the best answer to that. Said she, "Every morning, no matter what has happened, a woman has to get up and get breakfast for the family. And a man has to make a shelter for them somehow. And they're so busy at that they can't think much. It isn't a matter of choice—it's just primitive survival. It makes it possible for them to go on—and to bear what they have to bear!"

These homely chores that women of all time everywhere have always done have healing and rebuilding in their very necessity. And to them we must look not only for fortitude to go on but also for a new sense of values. In times of peace and prosperity life gets so comfortable and gadget-ridden that we lose our perspective; we forget which things are really necessary. In crisis we get back to bedrock and learn what life really requires. We're sure that the women of France, if we but had news of them, are rising to the needs of this dark hour like the ingenious, resourceful souls they've been throughout history. The women of Britain, and yes, the women of Germany and Russia, too, all are at heart far more absorbed with keeping their little families safe and cared for than with wars or victories or defeats.

Women in America are gradually facing curtailments in supplies that will put our households, too, on a wartime schedule, though the grimmer problems that war has brought to Europe don't actually face us yet. We've already heard about the aluminum shortage, which affects us in a pot or pan way. Copper, zinc, steel are also coming under restrictions. This will mean that ice trays and freezing units on electric refrigerators will be scarcer, that zipper fasteners will get rare, that bolts and nuts and wire will be hard to get.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Chicken Aspic

THE OLD saying, "You can't have your cake and eat it, too," doesn't hold true in the case of chicken. Do you like to plan chicken stew occasionally, just for the sake of the broth and have the cubed chicken left over for other uses? If so, buy a chicken and use the broth for soup or in other ways and use the stewed chicken cut in cubes to make a savory dish and prove this to yourself.

Calavo Chicken Aspic is a savory dish and is one of the best arguments for left-over broth and chicken that you'll find. With the cubed chicken, cubed Calavo and chewy slices of ripe olives to provide greater bulk an outstandingly flavorful type of aspic can be made. By using a large-sized summer Calavo you'll have garnish or salad left for other uses, so that puts thrift into the meal, too. Let the Calavo seed remain in the unused portion for best keeping. Cover the whole piece of fruit with waxed paper and store in the warmest part of the refrigerator. Make the aspic according to this tested recipe which came to me from the kitchens of the California Foods Research Institute.

Calavo Chicken Aspic

Cut Calavo into halves and remove seed and skin. Cut fruit into cubes to make 1 cupful. Heat 2 cups chicken broth to boiling point with ½-teaspoon celery salt. Add 4 teaspoons plain gelatin moistened in 4 tablespoons cold water and stir to dissolve. Cool until thick but not firm. Add 2 tablespoons minced sour pickle, ½-cup sliced ripe olives, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and 2 sliced canned pimientos, and stir to blend. Add the Calavo cubes and 1 cup cubed cooked chicken and blend lightly. Pour into a wet mold and chill until firm. Unmold at once and serve on lettuce, previously dressed with French dressing. Serves 6 to 8.

Beware Too Much Sun On Hair in Summer

By Ida Jean Kain

IT MAY BE a little late to warn you but there is such a thing as too much sun where your hair is concerned. If you are premitatedly blonde and don't bother to protect your hair it soon begins to look like straw. And if you are a brunette you're apt to turn into a monotone with hair and skin the same shade.

In any case, a great deal of sun is not good for your hair. It tends to destroy the cystine content and the results are brittleness and splitting ends. Since the amount of sun your hair can stand depends on how much oil there is in it, you should make a rule of brushing your hair vigorously every day. In addition, you might use one of the hair oils.

Brushing is the best conditioner for your hair. Just as a matter of course, you should brush it 100 strokes a day. And when your hair is dry, you should boost the number to 300 strokes or more. That may sound like a lot of brushing, but some of the women noted for their beauty make a habit of brushing their hair from 30 to 40 minutes daily.

Use Up and Out Stroke

Use the brush in an up and out stroke and at the end of the stroke turn the brush slightly to give the roots an extra tug and stimulate the circulation in your scalp.

Before you wash your hair, give it a thorough brushing and then afterwards massage the clean scalp with a cream or tonic containing some oil. The soap should not be too strong nor the water too hot as strong alkali solution and heat cause your hair to break.

If you are losing your hair, the trouble may be lack of brushing, your diet, or your health. Nobody can promise that a certain food will give you beautiful hair but we do know that protein is the element needed for building material throughout the body. It is the chief component of muscles, tissues and organs on the inside, and of skin, hair and nails on the outside.

The complete protein foods are milk, eggs, cheese and meat and are an essential part of your balanced diet. There is no doubt that they contribute to hair beautiy. But you must also have the fruits, vegetables and whole grains that are needed to balance your menus.

Strain Is A Factor

Unless you follow a well balanced diet, your hair may show the ill effects long before your health is affected. Worry and strain also are factors in the condition of health and hair.

Next to regular brushing the best resolution most of us could make would be to have our hair waved the day before it looks stringy instead of a couple of days later. After waving, a thorough brushing should be gvien. And the more you brush your permanent, the better it looks.

Waistline Drop Is Foreseen

Don't say we didn't warn you, children. Designers are definitely trying to get that waistline down around your hips again. They are beginning with tunics, fitted or belted at the natural waistline, but ending at the hips, with separate or attached skirts in contrasting colors.

For daytime wear, many of these tunics are glorifications of the old school middy. Simone Simon looks too cute in hers, a long, fitted white blouse which laces down the front from sailor collar to hipline. Lacings are practically a rope, in red. Skirt is navy blue, pleated all around.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to wear your favorite bandana a new way. Cut or fold it in half and sew grosgrain ribbon along fold or diagonal edge. Sew a few gypsy coins at one side and tie on with ribbon ends over or under corners at back

AS NEW CARS BECOME SCARCER, SO WILL GOOD USED CARS—pick yours now from the POST'S "BEST BUYS."

Have you stopped to think what further cuts in new car production will mean? They'll make new cars unavailable for a lot of buyers. These buyers will turn to late model used cars, increasing the demand for such cars. Or if they already have such a car, they won't turn it in on a new one. That will cut the supply of late model used cars. Demand up—supply down! You know the answer to that one yourself. The way to beat it is to act now—turn to the used cars advertised today in The Post's "Best Buys" and select the one you want now!

Sergeant Alvin C. York Coming to His Premiere

Jesse Lasky, Gen. Duncan Also to Be Present; Two Hits to Close Summer Festival Series; News Notes and Bits of Gossip of Amusements

NOW IT BEGINS TO COME OUT about the distinguished guests who will be present at the Earle Theater for the premiere of "Sergeant York" next Thursday night at 8:45. Foremost among the visitors will be Sergt. Alvin C. York, "in the flesh;" Jesse L. Lasky, responsible for the production of the picture, and Maj. Gen. George B. Duncan, U. S. Army, retired.

JESSE L. LASKY

Sergt. York will arrive in Washington on Wednesday and will be the central figure in a series of events planned in his honor, including a bundle of broadcasts over local radio stations. He will, of course, be the center of interest at the premiere, probably running a step or two ahead of the film based on his life.

Gen. Duncan, now a resident of Lexington, Ky., also will arrive in the Capital on Wednesday, at Union Station at 8:20 a. m., to be exact. Gen. Duncan was the commanding officer of the Eighty-second Division, in which Sergt. York served, when York performed his historic feat of wiping out a machine gun nest and bringing in 132 German prisoners single-handed. It was he also who pinned the Distinguished Service Cross on York's breast in recognition of his heroism.

Mr. Lasky, likewise arriving at Union Station on Wednesday, but at 12:35 p. m., is the motion picture pioneer who devoted 22 years to bringing the life of Sergt. York to the screen. How and why it took that long will be found in some detail in this department of tomorrow's Sabbath edition of the Capital's only big league newspaper. That would be The Washington Post and if you don't believe it, you don't read Time. Everybody should.

So Thursday night's would be quite a premiere even if "Sergeant York" were not so superlatively fine a picture as it is.

And while we are at it, we might as well clear up a few more points concerning "Sergeant York's" local engagement. Doors will open earlier than usual at both the Earle and Ambassador theaters when the picture's regular engagement begins in both houses on Friday morning, August 1. Daily, except Sunday, at the Earle, the locks will spring at 10 a. m., with the first feature hitting the screen at 10:45; Sundays at 12:45 p. m., with first feature at 1:30. Daily at the Ambassador, open at 12:45 p. m., first feature at 1:40, Sundays, at 1:15 p. m., feature at 1:55. . . . Stage revue at the Earle, in conjunction with "York," will feature Enrica and Novello, dancers; Helene Faye, violiniste, and the Roxyettes and will serve to introduce Tony Donadid, tenor, graduate student of Catholic University . . . Reduced prices will be in force at both theaters for service men in uniform and children—40 cents at matinees and 55 cents at night, both including tax. For the general public, 75 cents at matinees; $1.10 at night, taxes also included. The Broadway scale reaches a $2.20 top.

Judges Take the Bench Tonight

Tonight at 8, in Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest, the Committee on Volunteer Entertainment for the District Council of Defense will launch the auditions of "big time" performers eager to tour the nine training camps in and around the Capital. The judges at these auditions will be the drama desks of the local press, Harry Anger, of the Earle Theater, and Gene Ford, of the Capitol, assisted by Father Hartke, of Catholic University, Denis Connell and other members of the committee. Registrations have poured in at Room 500, District Building, far in excess of expectations. Two days ago, I was told that 70 entertainers already had volunteered. The number must be up in the box-car figures by now.

Two apparently sure-fire hits remain to complete the 1941 series of Summer Festival programs at the Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds. On Wednesday night, Justin Huntley McCarthy's "If I Were King"—starring vehicle for E. H. Sothern and Cecilia Loftus, back yonder in 1901—will be acted out by The Masquers of Roosevelt Community Center, and on August 6, the Washington Players will revive Will Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," for the fourth year. If the Sylvan is destined to attract any more 10,000 audiences, these two should be the ones to do it.

Stars Still Fall on Loew's

Because we had to scissor it out of a column that was too long a few days ago, this would be as good a time as any to mention that in addition to John Boles, coming along on Thursday, with Harriet Hoctor and Marty May, the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater in immediate weeks will be the stamping ground of such other headliners as Ella Logan, songstress; James Barton, Paul Haakon and Patricia Bowman, in joint appearance; Smith and Dale, veteran vaudevillians; Adelaide Moffat, socialite warbler; The Hartmans and Will Bradley and His Orchestra. What more do you want?

Be-of-Good-Cheer Note

The Enemy Spearhead Has Reached a Rear Position

PUZZLE: FIND THE RELUCTANCE!

This may or may not have been the scene upon which the title was based, but, at any rate, it has something to do with Walt Disney's "The Reluctant Dragon," which will continue for a second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Robert Benchley appears in this subject as a bewildered human being, wandering around among the pen-and-ink characters of the Disney drawingboards

Metropolitan

A sharply-contrasting featurette has joined "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" for its second-run engagement at the Metropolitan; while the filmusical treats the South in a giddily comic fashion, "Harvests for Tomorrow" takes a strictly humorless view of New England.

"Harvests for Tomorrow" is a three-reeler by the Department of Agriculture's AAA. It depicts how the rich soil of New England became barren through three centuries of constant usage and preaches the scientific doctrine of revitalization through soil conservation. Naturally akin to "The Plow That Broke the Plains" this newer documentary is quiet and leisurely in tone where the briefer work was more sharply defined, more exciting in pace. Its serene attitude is that so frequently characterized as "New England," but its constant repetition of both phrase and context is quite unnecessary.

The film is produced with that dignity and simplicity in detail so admirable to quality of most governmental motion pictures. There is an interesting, though occasionally self-conscious, score by John Alden Finckel, most effective indeed at its early and latter phases. While all the participants before the camera are natives of New Hampshire and Vermont, Frank Craven speaks the narration in that homely style which flowered so beautifully in a work of similar spirit, "Our Town."

"Kiss the Boys Goodbye," the central screen attraction, is, of course, the film version of the Clare Booth comedy. Mary Martin is beguiling as the musical Cindy Lou, who hopes to win stage stardom as a daughter of the Old South. Don Ameche plays opposite her as a wise producer and Oscar Levant, Elizabeth Patterson and "Rochester" have the other top spots. There's a lot of sprightly dialogue and a score of pleasingly tinkly tunes.

Columbia

Bob Hope and his little playmate, Dorothy Lamour, returned Thursday morning in their merry adventure for Uncle Sam, "Caught in the Draft." The Columbia is the scene of this visitation.

True to its title, "Caught in the Draft" plops the irrepressible Hope in the armed forces, not as a selectee, mind you, but as a bright chap who enlisted with the idea of being refused. He's not refused, though, and goes on to great glory despite himself.

"Caught in the Draft" is by far the wittiest of the defense-minded comedies which have started to inundate our screens. Lynne Overman and Eddie Bracken are characteristically amusing in the two chief supporting roles.

Lavish Wardrobe

Dorothy Lamour has one of the most lavish wardrobes created in many years for her role in "Caught in the Draft." The gowns are valued in excess of $5,000.

Stars and the Years

New York, July 25.

SUCCESS: When Gloria Swanson went to see a Broadway show recently she discovered that Norma Shearer was sitting directly behind her . . . "I hope this won't annoy you," said Miss Swanson . . . "Oh, not at all," Miss Shearer assured her. "Even seeing the back of your head is exciting" . . . Norma then related of her first visit to New York—when she and her sister and mother left Canada for the first time. They arrived in Manhattan with exactly $3, their total resources. On that memorable first night they walked up Broadway and stopped in front of a movie house which was featuring a Gloria Swanson picture. The three Shearers immediately held consultation, then carefully took $1.50 from their $3 fortune—and bought tickets.

NORMA SHEARER

HOSPITALITY: Within the next few days Eleanor Roosevelt will return Alexander Woollcott's visit to the White House by going to the island in Vermont where Woollcott lives and rules . . . Although the problem of entertaining the First Lady doesn't unnerve the imperturbable Woollcott, one question still lingers somewhere between rule and reason. All the guests who ever have stayed at that island have paid $7.50 per day. And so Woollcott must decide whether that custom shall be violated in honor of Eleanor Roosevelt.

ENTERPRISE: Monday evening Sherman Billingsley left his Stork Club and made a rare tour of other night clubs and restaurants . . . Last night, after arranging for the proper tables being assigned to Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Bubbles Schinasi, George Jessel and others, Billingsley joined a group of friends. And while they talked he drew some doodlings on the table cloth—strange patterns of squares, circles and crosses . . . "Do you know what this is?" he challenged . . . None could identify it . . . "That," said Billingsley, "is the complete floor-plan of Toots Shor's restaurant, showing all the tables and the capacity of 168."

CHATTER: Tonight the Affiliated Young Democrats of New York will announce their support of the Republican-Fusion trio, La Guardia, McGoldrick and Morris . . . Oscar Cox, who was borrowed from the Treasury Department by Harry Hopkins' lend-lease Administration, is slated for elevation as counsel to OEM . . . The first Pin-ups magazine in America—patterned after the British magazines of drawings which are pinned up in the barracks of England—will be published here August 1. It will be called "Beauty Parade," and the sketches will be drawn by Earl Moran . . . The Legal formalities now are being complied with, to change the name of the Hollywood Theater to the York Theater. That's where "Sergeant York" will be shown, after August 11.

CHANGE: Monday night at the Savoy-Plaza Milton Douglas completed his routine—and there were requests for him to sing a selection from "Figaro" . . . He turned to a ringsider and said: "I'll sing it if you'll accompany me on the piano" . . . And so Douglas sang it while Jose Iturbi—who this month declined to appear at a concert with Benny Goodman—played the piano in this Manhattan supper-club.

COVERAGE: Archie Mayo, the movie director, sat with Ted Lewis last night and listened to the bandleader lament the dearth of good picture stories . . . "That's the fault of history," said Mayo, "because the world is too young for the movie industry" . . . "What's the age of the world to do with good movies?" Lewis asked . . . "Because in the past 25 years," Mayo insisted, "the movies have covered 5,000 years of literature."

Famous Beauty Has a Rival

ELEANOR POWELL

"Takes half your energy," says Una Merkel, playing those ga-ga silly dames, "believing the character yourself, then making it believable to an audience."

When an interviewer asked little Joan Carroll if there were theatrical people in her family she said, "No, I'm the first of a long line of actors." . . . If you care, in "Parachute Battalion" you'll have the last chance seeing Nancy Kelly and Edmund O'Brien making love to each other . . . After being killed off in "Dr. Kildare," Laraine Day turns into a newspaper gal for "New York Story." Must be Metro's idea of heaven. Well, I could a tale unfold.

Ran into Gilbert Miller at Mike Romanoff's, who was so interested talking with Bette Davis and her husband he kept his wife, Kitty, waiting for dinner on their fourteenth wedding anniversary. At the same place were the Fred Astaires, Fred looking worn out from dancing in "You'll Never Get Rich." Wonder if public realizes how hard he works. First, with Ginger Rogers, who was not a dancer in his class when she started with him. Then Eleanor Powell, a different type dancer. Paulette Goddard, who wasn't. Now Rita Hayworth, who hasn't danced in years.

When Bob Cummings and Deanna Durbin were enacting a heavy love scene, Bob let out a yell that shook the rafters. Henry Koster demanded "How come?" Seems a huge pin on Deanna's chest had come unfastened and Bob was stabbed in the clinch. "Well," sighed Deanna, "I wondered if I could be THAT good!"

Two hottest numbers in town are Ann Sheridan and Martha Scott—Martha standing over an old-fashioned wood range, cooking honest-to-goodness meals for her hubby, Freddie March, and Ann, bundled to the neck in heavy winter coat, mittens, scarf, etc., sitting in a buggy with phoney snow, doing love scenes with Ronald Reagan.

Mary Windrow, a visitor, was offered a screen test, but declined with thanks. Said she liked air-cooling! . . . You'd have thought the Dick Powells were moving the other day, the way they were tearing the house to pieces. Dick lost a good luck ring, and they searched frantically for it. Suddenly Joan took time out to reprimand young Norman, aged 6, who was an interested spectator. "Norman, take your thumb out of your mouth," Norman did, and there was Dick's ring! Speaking of Norman, he's quite musical and wrote what he called a surprise symphony. When his mother asked him "Why?" he said, "Because I was surprised I could do it!"

Yesterday Don Ameche threw a double birthday celebration for his two sons, Tommy, born in 1939, and Lonny, born the same day last year . . . Andy Devine is rounding out his fifteenth year at Universal with "Badlands of Dakota."

RKO-Keith's

It is good news that Walt Disney's "The Reluctant Dragon" is continuing for a second week at RKO-Keith's, for its mixed reception has something of the phenomenal in it. As you may have heard, this is a travelogue of the Disney Studios through the eyes of Robert Benchley interspersed with a handful of typical Disney shorts.

The phenomenon is this: Some observers praise "The Reluctant Dragon," the final of the cartoons as well as the name-giver, and pass over "Baby Weems." Others prefer the horse-riding sequence to the former two. Some have commented adversely on being taken behind the magical scenes, while many have professed fascination by the tour.

In other words, the novel-minded Disney has distressed the factual while pleasing the fantasy lovers and vice versa. For the man who's content to sit back and relax, though, "The Reluctant Dragon" is a fascinating film, peppered with the observant wit of Benchley and the fantastic charm of the cartoonist.

As for the shorts, you'll have your favorites, but the tea-drinking dragon and the devastatingly wise Baby Weems get a couple of votes we know of. Keith's also is continuing the latest Information Please, in which Jan Struther is guest expert.

Hopes Losers Won't Picket It

He has invited the cast of "Underground," his painting party. Dorn has been trying unsuccessfully to paint the 400 picket fence around his home for the past two weeks. So, in true Tom Sawyer style, he is staging a painting contest. The winner will receive a ping-pong table and equipment.

Dorn hopes the losers won't picket the fence.

Why Not a Horse?

Lansing, Mich, July 25 (A.P.).—Clarence J. Bolander, of the Michigan department of agriculture declared today that in the future "we'll be grinding old autos up and using 'em for cow feed." "Eventually you will see entire cars turned out from soy bean products," he said. "Then Bossy will take charge of those unsightly junk piles."

Circulation Rises

The dealer in out-of-town newspapers at 603 Fifteenth Street Northwest had a "special" yesterday—copies of the London Daily Express and the London Daily Mirror not more than 24 hours old. The fast transatlantic delivery isn't daily service yet. British pilots flying over to pilot bombers back to England brought the papers to Montreal on the clipper.

Leahy Named Draft Chief; Succeeds Cox

President Expected To Approve Choice Of Capital Lawyer As Director Here

William E. Leahy, attorney and chairman of the District Selective Service Appeals Board, was named yesterday by the Commissioners to succeed Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox as Selective Service Director here. Presidential approval is expected.

MR. LEAHY

The board of appeals yesterday reported decisions made at its Thursday meeting, by which 10 registrants were ordered reclassified, seven appeals were refused and two cases were held over for future action.

Gen. Cox, who will leave the head draft office to go on active service as commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade, held his final staff meeting yesterday morning.

He thanked the staff for services performed under his administration and declared himself pleased at being informed Leahy was to succeed him.

In his letter of recommendation tendered the Commissioners, Cox had urged appointment of Leahy, who he said had performed an "outstanding piece of work" as appeals head, and would administer the Selective Service Act here "without favor."

A native of Monson, Mass., Leahy was educated at Holy Cross College and Georgetown University Law School. He served as assistant United States Attorney here from 1915 to 1919 and later as special United States Attorney and special assistant to the Attorney General in 1921 and 1925, respectively. He lives at 3325 Garfield Street Northwest.

Executive approval of the appointment of Warren R. Forster, 41, a vice president of the Hamilton National Bank, to membership on Local Board No. 3, also was received at local selection headquarters yesterday. Forster fills a vacancy created by the death last month of Edwin S. Hege. He lives at 4739 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Among regsitrants granted deferments, according to yesterday's appeals board report, was Dennis Francis Manning, 23-year-old registrant in Board No. 17, who is at work on Navy ordnance of a secret classification as an employe of the Washington Institute of Technology. Manning was placed in Class II-A as a necessary man.

Others deferred are John A. Farrall, 23, Board No. 24, clerk, called fit only for limited military service; John E. Clements, 21, Board 24, Navy Yard machinist; James T. Magher, 22, Board No. 9, FBI mail clerk, and Howard F. Newsom, 26, Board No. 17, student (deferred 90 days). The three last men all were deferred as "necessary men."

Excused for dependency were Richard F. Riggles, 21, Board No. 2, a clerk; Thomas E. McLean, 22, Board No. 21, employe of naval powder factory; Jack Rabinowitz, 23, Board No. 8, clerk; Ben J. Campbell, 28, Board No. 17, clerk, and Hyman S. Port, 23, Board No. 13, skilled helper in Treasury Department.

Service Club Again To Be Soldier Host

The National Capital Service Men's Club, 606 E Street Northwest, is providing another weekend of entertainment for visiting men in uniform. The club is sponsoring a showing of a Department of Justice film tonight, dealing with activities of the FBI. Red Cross hostesses will be on hand.

The United Service Organization's drive for $250,000 is just a little short of realization, the present receipts amounting to $231,000. USO headquarters will remain open the early part of next week to receive further contributions.

Little June Love, 11, of 3820 Morrison Street Northwest, borrowed some lemons and sugar from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Love, and went into the lemonade business to raise money for the USO fund. She sold 176 glasses at 1 cent each and proudly turned over $1.76 to local headquarters.

Capital Transit June Income Up

A net income increase of $26,503 for last June, over the same month last year, was reported yesterday by the Capital Transit Co. in filing its report with the Public Utilities Commission.

The report said operating revenues in June this year were $1,292,883, as compared with $1,051,003 last year. Operating expenses were $848,812, as compared with $697,991 last year. Provision for depreciation was $130,212 against $115,097 last year.

Mrs. Miller's Case To Be Stated on Air

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, will speak over WJSV at 9:50 a. m. today for the reinstatement of Helen Miller, dismissed Government employe.

The speech will be broadcast on behalf of the Washington Committee for Reinstatement of Mrs. Miller. The committee is composed of 26 C. I. O. unions in the District.

Perole Quartet Plays Again At Meridian Hill Park Concert

C. C. Cappel and National Capital Parks Service present the Perole String Quartet (Joseph Coleman, George Ockner, Lillian Fuchs and Ernst Silberstein) and Jascha Bernstein, violoncellist, on Friday night in Meridian Hill Park. Program: Two "Novelettes" from Opus 15 (Glazunov), Quintet in C major, Op. 163 (Schubert), Quartet in G minor, Op. 10 (Debussy).

Meterological good fortune continued to follow the "Starlight" chamber music concerts last evening, when the sixth program of the festival season was given in Meridian Hill Park by the Perole String Quartet. A lower degree of humidity in the air would have been more comfortable for both musicians and auditors, but that was the only flaw in one's enjoyment.

BROWN

Overhead the gleaming stars justified the chosen title, and the serenity of the elements was conducive to good hearing. Attendance showed no sign of slackening, and the terrace surrounding the fountained pool was crowded with attentive listeners.

Making its second appearance in the series, the Perole String Quartet opened the program with the "Interludium in Modo Antico" and "Orientale" from Glazunov's "Novelettes." In this work, Glazunov showed the courage of a pioneer in demolishing the tradition that quartets must be in sonata form. The music is deliberately picturesque and associative, instead of being abstract. The entire suite has five numbers of Spanish, Oriental, Viennese and Hungarian coloring grouped about the central interlude in olden fashion. This arrangement was regarded as more or less of a prank on the part of the composer, but he made further experiments of equal audacity before finally settling down to write quartets to which formalists could take no exception.

Jascha Bernstein was the assisting violoncellist in an excellent performance of Schubert's great C major quintet, one of the finest works of its kind in literature. The name "Swansong," which was applied posthumously to his last songs, rightly belongs to this splendid piece of poesy written only a few months before his death. For it he, who was always poorly paid for his compositions, actually received from a publisher the sum of 30 florins, equivalent now to less than $10.

The concert ended with Debussy's enchanting quartet, which despite traces of the influence of Franck and Borodin is thoroughly individual in essential qualities. Strict form was a thing which was antipathetic to Debussy, and the weakness of the quartet is the fact that even the dimensions of this particular form taxed his capacity to fill it. Yet the beauties of its jeweled details are such that one is oblivious of the inclosing frame.

Two Arrested In Attempt to Rob Conductor

Those "real policemen" at the Twelfth Precinct distinguished themselves again yesterday—apprehending two men within 15 minutes after they attacked and attempted to rob the conductor of a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train.

The victim, Joseph P. Wheeler, of 1009 Jackson Street Northeast, was accosted when he stepped from his train at the United Clay Products Co. siding near Bladensburg Road and New York Avenue Northeast.

Wheeler said he was going to telephone the train dispatcher that his train had cleared the main line when the two men came at him from a nearby woods.

One held a knife and the other punched him in the face. Wheeler told police. They demanded his watch and money. Wheeler ran toward his train yelling for help.

Someone called the train dispatcher, who called police. Three carloads of patrolmen and detectives sped to the scene.

Wheeler's yells had frightened the would-be bandits and they fled into the woods. The policemen scoured the territory and before long had two Negroes in custody, both identified by Wheeler. They were being held last night for investigation.

The policemen included Detectives Irving Lubore, E. E. Scott, L. M. Wilson, and Privates J. G. Beach and G. W. Cardona, all of whom figured in the capture last Monday of a man who attacked a 19-year-old girl and slashed her companion's throat. The companion, Private Lawrence McCullough, 32, of Fort Meade, Md., is still fighting for life at Walter Reed Hospital, where he was said last night to have a 50-50 chance to survive.

Jarrell and Swope Take Chest Posts

Karl E. Jarrell, vice president of the real estate firm of Thomas E. Jarrell Co., and Robert B. Swope, president of the Southern Oxygen Co., have accepted positions as Community Chest campaign executives, it was announced yesterday by Benjamin M. McKelway, chairman of the Metropolitan Unit business section.

Each will organize and direct the solicitation of office buildings and smaller business houses in downtown area.

Judge Casey Favors Court Merger Bill

The bill to merge police and municipal courts and establish an intermediate court of appeals was supported yesterday by Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey in a hearing before the Judiciary Subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Introduced last May by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, the measure is aimed at more efficient and rapid administration in the lower courts of the District.

The provision of the bill which would permit an administrative judge to assign associate judges to any branch or session of the court and distribute their duties more nearly equally was particularly recommended by Judge Casey.

Emphasizing the need of the intermediate appellate court, Attorney Lawrence Koenigsberger indorsed the entire bill also. He represented the District Bar Association's general committee on relations with the courts, and pointed out the association has recommended the idea some time ago.

Under the proposed legislation litigants in the lower courts would have the right to appeal their cases without the necessity of permission from the Court of Appeals.

Both Judge Casey and Koenigsberger pointed out that the appointment of an administrative judge would speed hearings and clear the courts of their crowded dockets.

Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, told the committee one of the most needed sections of the bill is the provision to compel judges to give quarterly reports on their work to the Attorney General and the District Commissioners.

The hearing will continue next Tuesday before the subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi. Harlan Wood, of the District Bar Association, and Walter F. Brownhall, clerk of municipal court, will testify.

Hiking Club Plans Sharps Island Visit

A visit to Sharps Island and the Sharps Island Lighthouse will be the main feature of the Capital Hiking Club's trip to Breezy Point Beach tomorrow. The hike, which will be led by Jack Jalickee, will start from 1416 F Street Northwest at 9 a. m., and reservations must be made by 5 p. m. today through Michigan 6363, branch 607.

Arlington's Need for U. S. Aid Increased

Admittedly dazed by the War Department's sudden proposal to construct a 35-million-dollar central building in Arlington County, Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager, announced yesterday the county would have to increase by several millions its recent application for two million dollars in Federal funds for extension of public services.

At the same time, the House Rules Committee yesterday opened the way for immediate action on the proposal when it approved a special rule which would waive all points of order against the 35-million-dollar appropriation.

Thus the proposal will come up in the House Monday as part of the eight-billion-dollar supplemental defense appropriations bill.

"Enough to Make One Dizzy"

The new building, to house all War Department offices and a personnel of 40,000, is to be erected on the site of what was formerly the Arlington Experimental Farm, on the south side of the Virginia entrance to Memorial Bridge. Arlington County officials already have been working for the past several weeks on the estimates for extending water and sewer mains, school facilities and roads, the need for which has been created by the recent influx of defense workers, the development of Washington Airport and the enlargement of Fort Myer and Arlington Cantonment.

On the basis of these needs, Hanrahan said, the county was prepared to go before the priority board in Alexandria next Tuesday and ask for two million dollars in Federal funds under provision of the Lanham Act, which offers Federal aid to communities affected by defense workers.

Now the estimates will have to be drastically changed and revised upward.

"It's enough to make one dizzy," Hanrahan exclaimed.

Thousands Will Move In

In the House hearing Thursday it was pointed out by sponsors of the project that, with the construction of the new War Department Building, thousands of workers there will likely move into Arlington County.

"It's a most unusual problem to face in an area of only 24 miles," Hanrahan said.

"All these Federal improvements present an unprecedented challenge in American municipal life, and it is fortunate that Arlington County has proper planning and zoning laws, as well as a modern police and fire system, to meet the new developments."

The county manager asserted that the county had not sought the improvements but that they were a natural result of the area's proximity to Washington.

Hanrahan pointed out that each time the Federal Government took over some of the county's land the county lost a source of taxation, but he added:

"I have great faith in the Federal Government's sense of fairness."

Man Hurt in Fall Down River Bank

Joseph Korbick, 25, of 1856 Mintwood Place Northwest, was recovering in Emergency Hospital last night from injuries suffered yesterday in a 20-foot fall down an embankment on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River.

On a picnic with his wife, Adele, and a friend, Jack Peden, of 3125 Ontario Road Northwest, Korbick was climbing the rocky slope when he lost his footing and fell.

John D. Holman Gets Webb Scholarship

John Desmond Holman, 19-year-old former Central High School student, has been awarded one of 25 four-year scholarships to the Webb Institute of Naval Architecture, New York City, as a result of competitive examinations in which 500 participated. Holman, of 5504 Eighth Street Northwest, studied last year at Bullis School in Silver Spring, Md.

Apartment Owners Face Ouster Quiz

House Committee To Check Previous Testimony in Dupont Circle Case

A House investigating committee early next week will pursue the testimony of a former newspaper woman who said yesterday she had been told it was useless to fight the move to oust her from her home at the Dupont Circle Apartment Hotel because "there is too much money and too much political influence behind it."

Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, the former newspaper woman, appeared with two other tenants of the hotel before the committee which is attempting to learn why some 1,000 tenants were ordered to give up their homes on a few days' notice to make Government office space.

Chairman Fritz Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, said both the former and new owners of the building would be called to testify when the hearings resume next Tuesday.

"Shadowing" Charged

This testimony also aroused comments from committee members:

That one tenant first learned the news of the change unofficially from New York in a message telling her to find another home, according to V. V. Palma, former curator of the rare book collection at the Library of Congress and leader of the more than 100 tenants who have thus far refused to leave the apartments on which they hold leases.

That the William J. Burns Detective Agency was hired to "try to get something" on ten tenants resisting the move, according to George E. Reedy, a correspondent for the newspaper PM.

Representative Alfred J. Elliott (Democrat), of California, declared: "This is almost the rottenest deal I ever heard of."

Mrs. Weed told the committee that many women Government employes who lived in the building "didn't dare fight and they all went out just as fast as they could because they were afraid of losing their jobs.

"Most of them had to take their vacation time to go and find some new place to live. Many had to go to small loan dealers to finance the move."

Stating that the Government ought not to take over buildings without knowing whether there are tenant leases on them, she said her complaint was nevertheless not against the Government but against the owners of the apartment. Palma and Reedy voiced the same opinion.

"No one would object if the Government stood forward and said frankly what it wanted," she said.

In his brief testimony, which continued from Thursday, Reedy charged Clay J. Guthridge, Government director of space control, with "abetment" of the effort to force speedy Government occupation of the building.

The management's version of the reason for leasing the building will be aired Tuesday at 10 a. m., when the hearing reconvenes.

Stephen G. Ingham, attorney for the corporation, told the committee yesterday that the following witnesses would appear Tuesday:

Harry L. Newman, new president of the corporation owning the building; Harrison N. Somerville, former president; Manager B. W. Anderson, former Manager Thomas R. Robertson and Riley A. Gwynne.

Any kind of weather you like, except the chilly kind, is included in the forecast for Washington today.

Fair weather—the bureau forecast fair weather for this morning.

Cloudy weather—that's expected this afternoon.

Stormy weather—likelihood of a brief thundershower this afternoon was noted in the forecast.

Warm weather—today's high will be around 88, compared with a high of 85 yesterday, and the low is expected to repeat yesterday's mark of 70.

Block Party Set For Service Men

The first of a series of "Block Parties" for service men and their guests will be given at the Treasury booth on Defense Midway tonight at 7 in cooperation with the District of Columbia Council of Defense Women's Battalion.

The Women's Battalion is an organization of more than 1,500 local girls who have offered their services to entertain men in uniform. They have been attending dances given at the various Army posts in the vicinity, and this time are inviting the soldiers to be their guests here in Washington.

Music will be furnished by a 12-piece orchestra from the United States Army Band. The Navy Band will give a concert in the square earlier, at 11 a. m., today.

Cass Named to Head Home for the Aged

The District Commissioners yesterday approved the transfer of Otto J. Cass, general superintendent of Public Assistance Services, to the position of superintendent of the Home for Aged and Infirm. The new position pays $1,000 less a year in salary, with a further deduction of $500 for maintenance. Cass had received $5,600 a year with the PAS. He requested the change because of

Montgomery Vote Test Case Argued

Arguments in the suit of John R. Reeves, of Bethesda, Md., seeking to force the permanent board of registry of Montgomery County to remove the name of Mrs. Blanche C. Oliver, of Chevy Chase, Md., from the voting lists, were heard yesterday in County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

Should the court uphold the contention of Reeves that Mrs. Oliver was registered illegally, the registrations of several thousand county voters will be in jeopardy.

Reeves and his attorney, Leo Bender, contended that the board erred in permitting registration of Mrs. Oliver before a full year had elapsed following the time she had made her declaration of intention to become a Maryland citizen.

The board, composed of Alfred D. Noyes (Democrat) and Rose K. Dawson (Republican), contended through its attorney, Joseph A. Cantrel, county solicitor, and Mrs. Oliver, through her attorney, Donald Bowie, jr., that the practice is proper and in accordance with a ruling of the attorney general at that time, now Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

The defendants claimed that registration of the voter within a year is legal provided he or she is not registered to vote in any general or special election within the year. It has been the custom in Maryland to permit persons who have declared their intentions of becoming citizens to vote in primary elections even though they had not declarde more than a year before the primary, defense contended.

Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott announced that they will take the case under considering for ruling after giving attorneys for both sides time to file their legal authorities.

Reeves is United States commissioner for the county and is president of the Seventh District Republican Club.

Tax Rate in Three County Areas Cut

Reduction of the tax rate in three special taxing areas of Montgomery County, Md., and a number of reductions in county road districts were disclosed yesterday in a report by County Auditor Alexander K. Hancock.

Northwest Park reduced its tax rate from 25 cents per $100 to 15 cents; North Chevy Chase from 25 cents to 20 cents, and Chevy Chase View from 10 cents to five cents.

The district road bond tax has been reduced one cent per $100 in the First, Third, Seventh, Tenth and Twelfth Districts and the part of the Thirteenth District which is included in the Silver Spring Library tax area. The Fourth District road tax has been reduced 2 cents.

The reductions were made possible by retirement of outstanding bond issues in the past year, Hancock said. The new rates will be effective in the 1941 fiscal year.

The Bethesda Public Library tax has been reduced by 1 cent to 3 cents per $100 in the fourth and seventh districts.

Leo Bender Named Examiner in Chancery

Leo Bender, of Silver Spring, Md., who has practiced law in Rockville since his graduation from law school in 1928, has been appointed an examiner in chancery for the Montgomery County Circuit Court. In announcing the appointment, Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott pointed out that work in the court has increased so much that a third examiner now is necessary.

Bender is a native of Washington and a former president of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, a member of the executive committee of the State Firemen's Association and was in charge of the fire-fighting school of the State Fire Extension Service the last two years. He is a Republican.

G. R. Cooksey Dies; Secretary Of the RFC

George Robert Cooksey, 61, native Washingtonian and secretary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since 1932, died at 3:05 p. m. yesterday at his home, 4211 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

MR. COOKSEY

His death was attributed to pneumonia, which followed a heart attack last Thursday. Funeral services will be conducted at 9 a. m. Monday at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Cooksey at the time of his death was a board member of Defense Supplies Corporation; secretary, Disaster Loan Corporation; vice president, Electric Home and Farm Authority; secretary, Metals Reserve Co., and secretary, Rubber Reserve Co., national defense units.

Born in Washington, Mr. Cooksey was the son of Charles E. and Mrs. Sarah Virginia Smith Cooksey. He was educated in the public schools. On October 14, 1907, he married Miss Annie C. Colliflower, of Washington, who died in 1921. There were six children, George Robert Cooksey, jr., Charles Thurman Cooksey, Harry Joseph Cooksey, of New York City; Annie Catherine Virginia Cooksey, Joseph Edward Cooksey and Mary Audrey Cooksey, of Washington. Surviving is one sister, Miss Blanche C. Cooksey, of Washington, and four grandchildren, George 3d, James Bernard, Virginia Ann and Carol Cecelia Cooksey.

Mr. Cooksey was elected to the secretaryship of the RFC on February 2, 1932, when Eugene Meyer, now editor and publisher of The Washington Post, was RFC chairman.

Mr. Cooksey began his career with the Washington office of the Associated Press in 1898 and continued there until 1913. His family yesterday recalled that he pondered long on undertaking the Government work—in which he was to advance so rapidly.

He was private secretary to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, 1913-17, and assistant to Secretaries of the Treasury McAdoo, Glass, Houston and Mellon, March 6, 1917 to October 8, 1921. He was director of War Finance Corporation, 1920-29; was a member of the Liquidating Committee of the War Finance Corporation, 1929-32; was chairman of that group from May 11, 1929 to March 7, 1932; was a member of the Federal Farm Board, May 10, 1927, to March 7, 1932.

Mr. Cooksey was a member of the National Press Club.

Probers Will Assail D. C. Trial Delays

Final House Report On Police Inquiry To Suggest Fewer, Briefer Adjournments

When it submits its full report Monday, the House police investigation subcommittee will recommend that the District courts reduce trial adjournments in number and length and that the present Metropolitan Police method of combating juvenile delinquency through Boys Clubs be continued, a committee member told The Post last night.

The announcement of the additions to the subcommittee's previously enunciated 14 recommendations came shortly before the Washington Policemen's Association met in extraordinary session behind closed doors to discuss the report of the House subcommittee.

Policemen agreed that a vote be taken today on the proposed abolition of the civil service system of promotion. Ballots will be distributed throughout the police precincts and later turned over to a special committee. Richard A. Burton, president, said he expects results to be in by Monday.

Upheld by Speaker

At the session, several policemen took the floor to discuss the merits of the civil service system. One of them said he highly favored it because it gave every man a chance for promotion through competitive examination.

"All of us can read and write," he said. "We can study the regulations in the books we have available and then, if we don't pass, we can blame no one but ourselves."

At this point, Frank M. Howard of the Harbor Precinct, the oldest private in point of service on the force, arose.

"I don't agree with you," he said. "We are being paid to do police work and not to study. I've been a policeman for 45 years and an officer's got to get out and work in order to be a good policeman. You can't learn that through books."

The member who told of the additions to the subcommittee's recommendations declared:

"The courts should and could give proper enforcement to the law by not giving long and frequent adjournments. The practice of allowing a defendant adjournment every time he asks for it results in discouragement to the police."

He spoke favorably of the Metropolitan Police Department's Boys Club program as a means of curbing juvenile delinquency in the District. The committee will recommend that the program continue, he said.

Legislation to Be Drafted

Meanwhile, Commissioner J. Russell Young yesterday directed that legislation be drawn up at once to make effective the changes recommended by the subcommittee.

Young directed that provision for the compulsory retirement of policemen at the age of 60 be incorporated in one of the new bills. He also ordered that legislation be drafted creating a police school here "just as good" as the FBI Academy, which trains police officials from various parts of the country under the direction of J. Edgar Hoover.

Another bill ordered prepared by the Commissioner would eliminate civil service requirements for promotion in the Police Department. In one section of the subcommittee report, the Civil Service Commission was assailed for what was called a "hasty effort to influence the attitude of the committee."

At the same time Young conferred with United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and District Budget Officer Walter Fowler on a new and more drastic habitual criminal act, to make Washington "an unsafe city for the lawbreaker." The report of the subcommittee had suggested collaboration between the Commissioners and the United States attorney. These bills will be ready for submission to Congress within a few days.

It was stated that the Commissioners had not officially discussed the question of a successor to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, expected to retire in October. Inspector Edward J. Kelly is expected to be the new chief. Young said appointment of a new chief of detectives was "still up in the air." Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief, and Floyd Truscott, of No. 10 Precinct, have been prominently mentioned.

Man Pondering Bridge Leap Saved

A 54-year-old man was hauled to safety from the outside ledge of the Taft Bridge yesterday afternoon after he had been observed standing outside the guardrail looking down into the 200-feet of space below the bridge.

William Moorehead, janitor of an apartment house at 2310 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was walking across the bridge at about 4 o'clock when he noticed the man standing or the ledge halfway across. Moorehead summoned Policeman W. J. Smith, of No. 8 Precinct, and the two succeeded in pulling him back over the rail.

The rescued man told police that he had been in ill-health. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Schroeder, Riggs Reach Net Finals

By the Associated Press

Sea Bright, N. J., July 25.—Bobby Riggs, fast reasserting himself as the game's top player, and up-and-coming Ted Schroeder defeated their opponents in championship style today and became finalists in the fifty-fourth annual Sea Bright Invitation Tennis Tournament.

While Riggs had a comparatively easy time with Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., Schroeder went all out in a dramatic five-set battle to conquer Wayne Sabin, of Reno, and boost his stock to a new high. The kid from Califronia won by scores of 6—3, 6—3, 7—9, 1—6, 6—3 after Riggs had ousted Mulloy in four sets, 6—3, 6—0, 5—7, 6—2.

The finals berth in the women's singles fell to New Yorkers, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke and Helen Bernhard. Mrs. Cooke, the top-seeded feminine entrant, moved into the title round at the expense of third-seeded Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., 7—5, 6—0. Unranked Miss Bernhard sprang a mild surprise by ousting Helen Jacobs, the 32-year-old veteran from Berkeley, Calif., 6—3, 3—6, 6—0. Miss Jacobs, a three-time Sea Bright champion, was seeded second, and her elimination left Riggs and Mrs. Cooke as the lone survivors of an imposing array of favorites.

Riggs, seeking an unprecedented fourth title here, and the 20-year-old Schroeder will battle it out for the men's title tomorrow. The women's final will be played Sunday.

The Schroeder-Sabin match easily surpassed everything in the tournament so far. The two and a half hour struggle saw both players perform brilliantly and display rare courage.

Braves Shell Card Hurlers And Win, 8-0

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 25.—The Boston Braves shelled two Cardinal pitchers from the mound with a double-barreled attack in the first two innings and defeated the league leaders, 8 to 0, tonight as Jim Tobin hurled three-hit ball.

A crowd of 22,933 paying customers scarcely was seated before the amazing Braves sent Starting Pitcher Harry Gumbert to the showers without retiring a man.

The first two men to bat worked Gumbert for free transportation to first base and singles by Sebastian Sisti and Carvel Rowell, coupled with Frank Crespi's error, gave the Beantowners three runs in the opening frame.

Ira Hutchinson was the victim of a five-run assault in the second when Paul Waner hit his first home run of the season after Tobin and Johnny Hessett had opened the inning with singles.

A base on balls to Max West, Rowell's single and Eddie Miller's double gave the Braves another tally before Hutchinson was relieved by Lefty Clyde Shoun, who checked the rampage after Crespi's second error in as many innings allowed another run.

Singles by Terry Moore, Johnny Hopp and Walker Cooper comprised the only damage to Tobin, who did not walk a man and allowed only one to reach third.

The defeat held the Cardinals to a half-game advance over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers, who dropped a double-header to Pittsburgh, and now trail by a full game.

'Cycle of Three' Jinx Against Whirlaway in Arlington Race

Johnstown and Bimelech Were First Two Favorites Who Ran Third in Chicago Classic

By Jack Guenther

United Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, July 25.—Somewhere in the pages of that familiar volume of familiar quotations there is an adage which holds that all thing—good or bad—occur in a cycle of threes. There is no rhyme and no reason to this maxim; just folk superstition and the usual mumbo jumbo which always surrounds a supposedly magical number.

Yet tomorrow in this city of brisk breezes I believe another of these mysterious cycles will be made complete. To be brief, Whirlaway will run in the Arlington classic and Whirlaway will be beaten. I'll go farther; I'll name the thoroughbred who will administer the defeat that is certain to be hailed as the turf upset of the year.

On the face of the thing the bush-tailed rogue from Calumet Farm should romp home. He is a good horse, perhaps even a great one. He has swept the triple crown, won around $235,000 and been classed as another Man o' War or at least an immortal. But just as every rose has its thorns, every single horse race has what is known as its "ifs."

There are at least two of these hounding Whirlaway in the classic, and if you believe in such things as jinxes there are three. The first is the horse I think will beat him, Our Boots. The second is a sudden switch in jockeys and the third is, purely and simply, the jinx of the cycle of threes. Let's take them up in reverse order.

The jinx is well founded. There is a superstition woven around the classic that few favorites have managed to buck. Two years ago a tall, blaze-nosed beauty named Johnstown came to Chicago hailed as a super horse. He was backed down to 3-5 yet he was convincingly bested by both Challedon and Sun Lover. He never came back to the tracks again.

Last summer the lightning struck again. This time it was Bimelich who was the object of all the affections. The son of Black Toney went to the post carrying half the crowd's money on his shiny black shoulders, yet when the numbers went up on the tote board Bimelech, too, was third—staggering helplessly far behind Sirocco and Gallahadion.

Now about the jockey. I have seen Whirlaway run a dozen times in all and the only little man I have ever watched hold this swerving son of a gun straight and true when he was running his best is Eddie Arcaro. Well, Arcaro won't be up in the stirrups tomorrow. He'll be sitting back in New York,

Auker Checks Nats, Browns Triumph, 5-3

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Nats were the victims of some under-handed work yesterday. Big Elden Auker, of the St. Louis Browns, who throws the ball from far below the belt, with his knuckles virtually scraping the ground, restricted the Nats to seven hits and pitched the Browns to a 5 to 3 victory.

That three-game winning streak of the Nats is no more. Six thousand Ladies Day guests and customers saw it expire from an overdose of Auker's pitching. The heat was intense and so was the humidity, because the defeat sent the Nats back into the league cellar.

It wasn't Jimmy Bloodworth's fault why the Nats were licked. He collected three of the club's seven hits and for eight innings his two-run homer of the second stood as the Nats' only runs of the game. The Nats made a feeble attempt to get back in the ball game with two out in the ninth, but were able to stir up only one run where there was a great need for three.

Kennedy Losing Pitcher

Vernon Kennedy was the losing pitcher. His old pals on the Browns knocked him loose from his 2-0 lead in the second inning with a three-run uprising and they cuffed him for 12 hits in the six and one-third innings he worked. Ultimately, a two-bagger by Walter Judnich knocked Kennedy out of the box.

Auker had control of his underhand delivery, walking nobody. He won in the manner best calculated to stop the Nats—by holding such as Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis and Roger Cramer hitless throughout the afternoon. None of them reached base. From the third through the eighth, Auker gave up

Bosox Come From Behind To Win, 10-6

Jimmy Foxx Provides Powerful 3-Bagger In Eighth Inning; Grove Is Jubilant

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 25.—After staggering momentarily, old Robert Moses Grove recovered today and trudged sturdily into the company of baseball's immortals, achieving the 300th victory of his fabulous major league career as the Boston Red Sox surged from behind to defeat Cleveland's Indians, 10 to 6.

Twice the Sox had rallied from four-run and two-run handicaps to equalize the count, but it remained for Jimmy Foxx, who jumped to fame with Grove as a member of the Philadelphia Athletics, to provide the payoff-clout which broke Cleveland hearts in the eighth inning.

From then on Old Mose just breezed to his well-earned triumph, which he had been twice denied in two previous attempts to gain the select circle last reached by Grover Cleveland Alexander in the golden 20s.

"The thrill of a lifetime? This is it!" grinned Mose as little Dom DiMaggio, who collected Lou Boudreau's hoist for the final out, handed him the winning ball in the jubilant Red Sox locker room.

Ball to Cooperstown

Grove, tired and dripping with sweat after being rushed by police through a mob of screaming fans, said he would send the ball to Cooperstown, N. Y., to be placed in baseball's hall of fame.

"Quit now?" Grove almost screamed in answer to a question. "They'll have to cut the uniform off me. I'm going out for another 300. They couldn't be any harder to get than the first 300."

Victory was all the sweeter for the 41-year-old lefthander for in his two previous quests he had seen his teammates fail him, first at bat as "Bobo" Newsom shut them out in Detroit, 2 to 0, and then in the field as Johnny Rigney gained an extra-inning decision.

But there was none of that today and the Sox blazed back with all their renowned power after giving the Indians a 4-0 jump in the first three innings while surprising Joe Krakauskas was holding them hitless.

They got two back in the fourth, driving Krakauskas to the showers in the process, and Ted Williams knotted the count in the fifth with a vicious belt into the right field stands, scoring Lou Finney ahead of him.

Jim Tabor Hits

"Lefty" fended the Indians off handily in the eighth and then Foxx put No. 300 in mothballs, tripling to right center after DiMaggio and Cronin had walked. Tabor followed with his second homer but that was excess baggage.

Grove becomes the twelfth major

Harmon Leading In All-Star Poll

Chicago, July 25 (INS).—The University of Michigan's great backfield stars, Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski, continued to lead the poll of college players to start against the Chicago Bears in Soldier Field the night of August 28 in the annual All-Star game.

Harmon has polled 733,986 votes and Evashevski, 702,118.

Spud Chandler Blanks Chisox for Yanks, 8-0

New York Takes 7th Straight Game; Keller, Henrich Homer; Chisox Limited to 3 Hits

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Spud Chandler pitched three-hit ball today to shut out the Chicago White Sox 8 to 0 and keep the New York Yankees romping through the American League.

It was the Yanks' seventh straight victory, their twenty-fourth in 26 games and their thirty-eighth in their last 44 tussles for a pace unparalleled in either major league.

Chandler had the Sox helpless all the way. The only hits he allowed were singles by Luke Appling in the first and ninth innings and a single by George Dickey in the sixth.

Neither got past first on their singles, although Appling walked in the seventh and reached third on two infield outs. He was the only Chicago player to get beyond the initial station.

In contrast the Bronx Bombers blasted Lefty Ed Smith and Pete Appleton for 13 hits, including a pair of three-run homers by Tom Henrich and Charley Keller.

The Yanks made four hits in the first three frames without scoring, but in the fourth they sent 11 men to the plate in a five-run rally.

Keller Singles

Keller started it with a single with one out. Skeeter Webb fumbled a smash by Phil Rizzuto and Spud Chandler singled to fill the sacks. Then Johnny Sturm waited out a walk to force in one run; Red Rolfe grounded into a force play at second for another, and Henrich hit his eighteenth homer into the righ-field sands for three more.

The next inning Smith gave way to a pinch hitter and Appleton took over, holding the Yanks scoreless until the eighth when Joe DiMaggio was safe on an error by Appling. Gordon walked and Keller brought them home with his twenty-fifth circuit clout of the year. This gave him 86 runs batted in and a lead of 2 over DiMaggio in their rivalry for the league lead.

DiMaggio made two singles to extend his new hitting streak to eight games. He now has hit in 64 of his 65 games.

Grange Drops Suit Against WendellWilson

By International News Service

Chicago, July 25.—The $50,000 slander suit of Harold "Red" Grange, former "galloping ghost" at the University of Illinois, against Wendell Wilson, the University athletic director, was all off tonight and the two were friends again, at least for purposes of the record.

"Red" withdrew the suit when he received from Wilson a telegram retracting the charge that Grange was not telling the truth when he said he had been offered a position on the Illinois coaching staff by Wilson.

Grange also asserted that the offer carried with it the implication, at least, that Wilson was planning to take over the job of Bob Zuppke as head coach of the football team.

Wilson said in the telegram retracting the charge of untruthfulness that "'Red' and I have always been good friends and I know that we will continue to be as in the past—100 per cent for Illinois."

Conn Declines Screen Career for His Wife

Tonight he turned thumbs down on a studio proposal to give his wife, the former Mary Louise Smith, a part in his forthcoming movie, "The Pittsburgh Kid."

Oh, Happy Day! Husbands Finally Get Good 'Alibi'

By International News Service

Sedalia, Mo., July 25.—Husbands attending the Missouri State semi-pro baseball tournament reported tonight that the management's unique plan of issuing "doghouse clearance" cards at the end of the games was working fine and that everything at home was lovely.

With a triple-header on one night, the last game was not over until 2:35 a. m. That explanation never would have got over with friend wife waiting up at home had not tournament officials provided all male fans with "clearance cards" as they left the park. The time at which the games ended was stamped on each pasteboard.

Whirlaway Without Arcaro

This afternoon at Chicago, Whirlaway goes to the post again and Eddie Arcaro won't be on his back. That, to certain racing folks, is a disturbing situation for the $60,000 Classic Stakes, and there may be a reluctance to give Whirlaway the wholehearted backing due a Derby-Preakness-Belmont winner. Whirlaway without Arcaro is supposed to be a little bit unthinkable.

POVICH

Certainly the little Italian boy and the big chestnut colt have been one of the superlative teams of racing. Only under Arcaro has Whirly run his best races. At a time when Whirlaway was running out from under other riders and losing races by swinging wide on the stretch turn, Arcaro took him in hand and guided him to the coveted Triple Crown.

The evidence was that Arcaro knew how to ride Whirlaway. Whether it was the short left stirrup he used or whether he was whispering sweet caution into Whirly's ears, Arcaro was never carried wide by Whirly, whose out-running habits had earned him the soubriquet of Magnificent Screwball. Arcaro apparently could do things with the horse. As recently as last week in the trial for the Classic, there was grave danger that Whirlaway, without Arcaro, would get beat. With Arcaro in the East, Wendell Eads had the mount on Whirly and it is significant that the horse carried Eads wide on the last turn, losing a long lead to three horses hugging the rail. Only Whirly's famed stretch-running burst enabled him to come again and win the race.

Arcaro would have been on Whirlaway this afternoon save for a stupid sort of performance at Empire City last Saturday. Arcaro, already under contract to ride Whirly in today's race, foolishly embroiled himself in a foul while astride a $2,000 plater named Bright Guy and was suspended by the Empire stewards. With the Illinois Commission respecting the New York ruling, Arcaro is grounded for today's race.

Jones' Judgment Respected

Ben Jones, the Calumet Farms trainer, has chosen Al Shelhamer as Whirlaway's rider today and at first glance it seems to be a surprising choice. Shelhamer has never been rated with the fashionable jockeys. But horsemen are willing to concede that the veteran Jones knows what he is about by naming the Colorado lad as Whirly's rider.

"I'm willing to trust Ben Jones' judgment," says Humphrey Finney, erudite editor of the authoritative Maryland Horse. "Shelhamer is a smart lad, according to H. G. Bedwell who has had him under contract for a long time. Mr. Bedwell used to point him out to me as a boy who was certain to be a fine rider. Around the Bedwell barn, he made a point of learning all the horses' habits. A compliment from Bedwell is a tribute to any jockey.

"More important, though, is the apparent fact that Shelhamer is smart enough to ride to instructions. He'll get those instructions from Ben Jones. A trainer knows more about his horse than any jockey, because he spends more time with him. Jones knows all the habits and idiosyncracies of Whirlaway even better than Arcaro. Instructions win races."

It is with good reason that Jones has chosen Shelhamer, Finney points out. "The lad is tall as jockeys go. He doesn't have that ridiculously high perch on a horse that some riders have. Those long legs will enable Shelhamer to exert more of a brace against Whirlaway at the turns. He should be able to handle Whirlaway."

The classic example of a horse and jockey team was the Mad Hatter-Earl Sande combination, says Finney. "In all my connection with horse racing, I have never seen anything to compare with Sande on Mad Hatter. Somehow, he was able to get the best out of that sour, cranky, cantankerous horse.

"Mad Hatter was owned by the Rancocas stable and they also had La Verne Fator as a contract rider. There wasn't much choice between Sande and Fator as jockeys. They were both tops. But Mad Hatter would never run well for Fator, and he always ran well for Sande. I doubt if Fator ever won a race with the horse. Somehow Sande did things with the old fellow.

"Sande told me once that Mad Hatter didn't like to be made to run. Sande used to say that he had to kid the old horse along and make him think he was running his old race—that you weren't trying with him. I guess that's what made Sande a great jockey. He had the knack of learning all those things and the patience to apply them."

European Horses Are Different

The war has driven much of Europe's best b[illegible] blood to th[illegible] country, and all American jockeys are not successful with the imported mounts. Finney also pointed out. "That British horse Abbe Pierre that won the other day at Empire City, and the other one, Trois Pistoles, which also won, won't run for all American riders. They're not used to the short rein of our boys. In England they learned to run swinging along by themselves under a rider who had a seat that was a cross between a hunting seat and our racing seat. Horses don't like to change their habits. Freddie Smith, who rode Abbie Pierre, is the kind that can let a horse swing along under a long rein."

Just what Whirlaway's niche in the American turf will be mystifies Finney to some extent. "In view of his defeats as a 2-year-old and earlier this season, I don't know if he can be rated with such as Man O' War and Sun Beau and the other greats. I don't know if he will earn super-horse rating, but this season he is a terrific horse. When he came from five lengths back of the last horse to lead the Preakness field by five lengths within the space of little more than a quarter mile, it was the finest exhibition of running I've ever seen. I wish I had a watch on him for that quarter mile. Whirlaway must have covered it in 22 seconds. Col. Bradley used to say that a horse that covered the last quarter mile in 25 seconds could win the Derby."

Blue Sox Needed New Fence, So They Sold Lefty Grove

By G. C. McKown

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 25.—Credit for the discovery of Moses "Lefty" Grove, Boston's great pitcher who yesterday won his 300th major league game, goes to "Bill" Louden, an old-time player with the Detroit Tigers, who induced the great Grove to leave the hills of Lonaconing, Md., and enter professional baseball.

Here in Martinsburg where Grove got his start in pro ball with the Blue Sox of the now defunct Class D Blue Ridge League, Dr. G. P. Morrison, president of the club at that time, recalls incidents concerning the 1920 entrance of the famed portsider into organized baseball.

Louden was manager of the team at that time and heard reports of a young, gangling lefthander who was burning up the sandlots in the Cumberland, Md., section. So interested was Louden that he made a special trip to the Lonaconing section to watch the youngster in action.

Without any difficulty Louden signed Grove to a Martinsburg contract and brought him back here. Although extremely wild and awkward in his delivery, Louden recognized possibilities in the boy's speed.

Burned Up League

Given tutoring here for a few days, Grove was started as a regular pitcher on a team that included "Hack" Wilson, later National League home run king, and Johnny Neun, who went on to play first base for Detroit and is now managing Newark in the International

Bronx Friends Honor Memory Of Lou Gehrig

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Two blocks from Yankee Stadium, where he wrote baseball records into the books for 16 years, the memory of Lou Gehrig was honored today when the Bronx designated an "island" in the middle of 161st Street as "Lou Gehrig Plaza."

Before a crowd of about 100, Bronx Borough President James J. Lyons placed a 1-foot square enamelled metal sign on a post on the island. In white letters on a blue background, the sign bore the name "Lou Gehrig Plaza." In the corners of the sign were crossed bats and baseballs.

Coria, Battistoni, Thomson Take Lead in St. Paul Open

20 Players Break Par; Coria Sets All-Time Record For Tournament

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Minn., July 25.—The field and the weather literally "turned the heat" on Keller course and the $7,500 St. Paul Open Golf championship today.

Through a first-round program which saw the temperature hold to an unrelenting 98 degrees, some 4,000 perspiring spectators saw no less than 20 players smash Keller's par 72 in a free-for-all fight in which three players carded five under par 67s to split opening-day honors.

They were Joe Coria, of St. Paul, and Gene Battistoni, of Norwood Park, Ill., both comparatively unknown professionals, and Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., long a personage in golf's bigtime show and one of its longest hitters.

Coria, however, had an edge over his rivals, for the 30 shots he took negotiating the out nine was an all-time tournament mark, six under par for the nine. Coming back he had 37, one over regulation figures. He holds the Minnesota State championship.

Thomson's Finest Round

Thomson had nines of 33-34, winding up with an eagle at the eighteenth. He said it was the finest tee-to-green game he has ever turned in and only the failure of his putter on 6-foot-and-under shots kept him from being undisputed leader.

Battistoni, assistant pro at one of the Chicago district clubs and a printer when he isn't teaching golf, went out in 32 and came back in 35.

Only a shot off the pace were two veterans, Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and big Ralph Guldahl, of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif. Cooper, winner of this championship three times, had his 68 on nines of 34-34. Guldahl, playing the kind of game which made him National Open champion in 1937 and 1938, went out in 33 and back in 35.

No fewer than six players had 69's presaging a lively scrap in tomorrow's round which will determine the 64 low scorers to battle through Sunday's 36-hole final. They were Jimmy Hines, Great Neck, N. Y.; Lloyd Mangrum, Monterey Park, Calif.; Horton Smith, Pinehurst, N. C.; Johnny Bulla, of Chicago; Al Huske, of Dekalb, Ill., and Dick Metz, of Oak Park, Ill., who won this event in 1939 with a record score of 270.

Hogan Cards 70

Ben Hogan, leading money winner of the year and bidding for a fifty-second straight tournament "in the money," was in a spot to challenge for the lead, his 70 being one of five turned in during the day. Other 70 shooters were Sam Snead, George Matson, of Wichita, Kans.; John Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., and George Dawson, of Chicago, the latter acquiring the day's low amateur scoring laurels.

Byron Nelson, former National Open and P. G. A. titleholder who had a 62 yesterday at his home club at Toledo for the best round of his career, failed to conquer Keller's par, turning in a 73.

Mrs. Herbert Takes Parks Tennis Crown

By Jack Munhall

Willie O'Steen Herbert, who is fast becoming to local women's tennis what Barney Welsh is to the men's game, yesterday won her fourth straight public parks title, and for the third time in four years her final round victim was Charlotte Decker. Starting slowly but winding up with a flourish, Mrs. Herbert defeated Miss Decker, 6—4, 6—0, before a large gallery on the Reservoir courts.

Earlier Bobby Bensinger, the red-thatched, freckle-faced former national boys' indoor champion, set himself in position to win his first men's tournament by advancing into the finals with a straight-set victory over top-seeded Ray Stocklinski. Bobby, seeded third, won, 6—3, 6—3, in a rather spectacular duel of drop shots, in which Stocklinski gradually lost his early superiority in this department.

Neither Victor Extended

In neither encounter was the winner extended, and each match lasted barely 35 minutes. Mrs. Herbert, a notoriously slow starter, dropped the first two games to Miss Decker, but thereafter she never trailed. The first set was decided at 4-4 before Mrs. Herbert's whistling placements took effect and gave her the necessary two straight games. The second set, as the love count indicates, was a complete walkover for Mrs. Herbert, who recently regained her District women's title after relinquishing it for a year.

Willie's shot-making in the last few games of the second set was really something to see. With a serious nonchalance she put away point after point with beautifully deceptive cross-court forehands and backhands. The usual exchange in these games consisted merely of Mrs. Herbert receiving one shot from her opponent and whisking it back where it could not be returned.

Bensinger Masters Veteran

Bensinger, the flippant, gum-chewing youngster just turned 17, had too much oomph for the 29-year-old Stocklinski, a veteran of municipal play who had been top-seeded for this tournament more on reputation than on anything he had accomplished this year. The two sets followed a similar pattern, with the game score going both times to 3-all before Bensinger bore down to sweep three straight games.

Stocklinski nettled Bobby with frequent drop-shot placements in the opening set, but soon Bensinger demonstrated that he also knew how to play that kind of game and gradually took the initiative from Stocklinski. Once Bobby got the knack of handling Ray's drop shots, Stocklinski was a beaten player and he was one of the first to realize it.

Though he probably did not need it, Bensinger received a pair of important breaks with the count tied at 3-all in the first set. With the game score at deuce, Bensinger won two consecutive points on shots that struck the net cord and spun over to the surprise of Stocklinski.

Bensinger, who is in his first public parks tournament, will seek the title Sunday against the winner of today's semifinal match at 2 p. m. between second-seeded Eddie Miller, University of Maryland sophomore, and Ken Dalby, the Kenyon College junior.

Following this match, at about 4 p. m., Bensinger and Charlie Freer will play Miller and Harry Brinkerhoff, jr., for the doubles championship.

Macks Defeat Tigers, Near First Division

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 25.—The fast-stepping Athletics moved within one game of the American League first division today by pounding out 15 hits for an 11 to 5 victory over Detroit.

It was the A's fifth victory in a row and Detroit's eighth straight defeat.

Phil Marchildon and Al Benton hooked up in a pitching duel for six innings with the A's out in front, 2-1. Benton was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh and the A's tore into Floyd Giebell for six runs. Frank Hayes' single with the bases full and Pete Suder's triple with two on featured the big inning.

The Tigers knocked out Marchildon and Luman Harris in the eighth, but Bump Hadley came in after Detroit and scored four runs and averted further danger.

Cardoza Girls Face Lincolnettes Today

Cardoza A. C. colored girls' team, formerly Joe Louis' Brown Bombers, will engage the Washington Lincolnettes tomorrow at Washington Softball Stadium at 1:30 p. m.

In the second half of the doubleheader at 3 p. m. Lincoln A. C. and Civil Service, two of the city's outstanding colored clubs, will meet.

Players, Fans Riot as Cameo Loses to Little Tavern Nine, 1-0

Fight Starts When Tavern's Wheeler Is Put Out On Attempted Steal; Peacemaker Is Socked

Benefitting from a fourth-inning error by Cameo Furniture's Johnny Bonifant, the Little Tavern nine's Bunny Good crossed the plate for the run that defeated the league leaders of The Washington Post Industrial League, 1 to 0, in a riotious session on the Ellipse yesterday.

The game progressed in orderly fashion for 7½ innings— when the Tavern's Bert Wheeler decided to steal home. Waiting for him was Catcher Jimmy Schwab, who promptly put him out. In a second Wheeler was full of indignation and loudly told the world in general and Schwab in particular just what he thought of the situation.

As the Ellipse reverberated with this exchange of opinions, team mates of each rushed in and, with spectators abetting the battle, a lively fight started. Half of each team finally managed to pull the other half out of trouble and the game proceeded, with warm comments on all sides.

Ended though it was, the fight must have continued in the minds of Tavern's second baseman, Clark, and Jimmy Schwab's brother, Joe, for they decided to settle it at the end of the ninth and socked meaningfully at each other.

Frank Watt, a policeman who was playing a peaceful ball game on the same lot, stepped in to call off hostilities but he was considerably outnumbered by those who felt that the melee should continue. As fists flew, one unidentified paw unaccountably went for Watt, but caused no damage.

Lansburgh's Softball Team Scores, 7 to 1

Behind the pitching of Ted Lannon, Lansburgh's ten defeated Giant Food, 7 to 1, yesterday when it played off a postponed game in the Sport Center Sunday League. It was Lansburgh's second straight victory over Giant Food and puts the winners one game behind the league leaders, Standard Linen, which they play Sunday.

All five of Lansburgh's triumphs in the second half of the race are credited to Lannon. Its lone loss was to Greenbelt, with Oren Shanks on the mound.

Union Printers Entrain for Baseball Series

Washington's Union Printers baseball team entrained last night for the annual Printer Championships at Indianapolis, Ind., which begins tomorrow, and although the locals have won 16 out of 25 national titles, they hold no high hopes of emulating the feats of past District teams.

This season injuries and sickness have played havoc with the Typos. The Printers are without the services of two of their better pitchers, Willie Boteler and Tommy Doonis, who were drafted by the Army. But this is not all—also out and ailing is Tom "Tuck" Dalglish, star player, who has a bad shoulder and can't throw, but he may see action.

Tie for First Place

The Printers finished second in the first half of the Government League after being beaten by Naval Air Station in a best two-out-of-three playoff, which gave the Airmen the top position. Currently the Typos are third in second-half play.

Regardless of how far the Washington team gets in the elimination series, the players will stay a week in the Indiana city. A busy program has been mapped out for the visiting clubs, which includes dances, old-fashioned barbecues, automobile races at the Indianapolis Speedway, banquets, and a night ball game at Perry Stadium, home of the Indianapolis Indians.

The final championship game is scheduled for next Friday. In the evening there will be a farewell party and dance at the Hotel Lincoln, at which time prizes and trophies will be awarded the winning team and its members.

Pirates Beat Flock Twice To Gain Third

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 25.—The soaring Pittsburgh Pirates swept two games from the Brooklyn Dodgers today, 8 to 4 and 8 to 2, to leap into third place in the National League while knocking the Dodgers farther out of first place.

They handed Brooklyn's pitching ace, Whitlow Wyatt, his fourth straight defeat in the first game, rallying for four runs in the eighth inning to break a tie, and in the nightcap beat Curt Davis, who had won six in a row for the Dodgers.

Pirates Go Wild

Wyatt managed to hold the Pirates scoreless from there until the seventh, while his teammates tied the score in the fifth on two singles and two errors, and forced two runs in front in the sixth on Pete Reiser's triple and a pair of singles, driving Rip Sewell off the mound.

Pittsburgh tied the score in the seventh through Debs Garms' pinch single which Reiser threw away and in the eighth blew the game wide open with four hits, three of them successive singles and one of them Vince DiMaggio's double with the bases loaded.

The Dodgers opened the scoring in the nightcap with a run in the first, but John Lanning lasted the route on eight scattered hits and the pugnacious Pirates raked four Brooklyn pitchers for 13, bunching 6 of them for three runs in the third and collecting four runs in the sixth with Maurice Van Robays' double with the bases loaded furnishing the climax.

Wilda Martin Captures Golf At Washington

Wilda Martin, with 13 4's and 5's, yesterday won the Friday ladies' day golf tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club. Second in the contest decided by who scored the most 4's and 5's on 18 holes, was a tie among Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, Mrs. Charles Lynch and Mrs. R. Rudio, each with 10 4's and 5's.

ARMY-NAVY

Mrs. M. Maxwell scored ten 5's to won the Friday ladies' day golf tournament at Army-Navy Club. Mrs. J. McClelland, with ten 6's, was second, and Mrs. L. Puryear, with four 4's, was third.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. H. J. Plossner was Class A winner in a ladies' day blind bogey golf tournament at Congressional. Mrs. Plossner had 101—18—83, the number drawn, to top Mrs. C. E. Penn, with 89—17—82.

Class B honors were taken by Mrs. C. E. Slawson, with 112—23—89. Second was Mrs. R. E. Burks, with 168—21—87.

Class C, or beginners' class, was won by Miss Julie Harper, with 68—22—46 for nine holes. Winner for lowest number of putts in Class A was Mrs. H. A. Knox, with 30; in Class B, Mrs. H. Weber with 33, and Class C, Mrs. C. W. Hammett, with 40.

Department of Justice Netmen Score, 4-1

In a postponed match, the Department of Justice netmen scored over the Navy Department, 4-1, in Group B of the Government League Thursday on the Odell Tennis Courts, of Arlington.

The winners top the league with 27 matches won, and 3 lost.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

SPORTIN' AROUND

New York, July 25.—Bobby Feller is tryinig hard, of course, but he has no illusions left about the Indians winning the pennant. "We just can't hit like the Yanks," he says. "They can always get that big hit when it hurts the other team most. We can't." . . . Lou Nova believes that the Negro has a more "dynamic stance" than the white man. Up at Holes, Me., where he is starting his preliminary training for the Louis match, Lou is taking instructions in proper posture. He hopes to improve his punch this way by getting his full weight into his blows, as Louis instinctively does.

CONSIDINE

Whirlaway will make $42,125 in about two minutes and four seconds tomorrow afternoon in the Arlington Classic at Chicago. Unless the impossible happens and he is nosed out for the boodle by Our Boots, Blue Pair, Attention or Bushwhacker (the first two named have beaten him) Whirly will earn about $100 per leap, or approximately $18.67 per yard. Which, to Whirly's regret, ain't hay. At that, Joe Louis proved he could make dough faster. He earned about $300,000 by knocking out Max Schmeling in two minutes and four seconds—and got to keep nearly $100,000 of it for himself. Getting back to Whirlaway, if he wins tomorrow he'll jump from nineteenth to tenth on the all-time money-winning list, with $289,461. If he stays sound he'll be a cinch to top Seabiscuit's record mark.

DiMaggio Glad He Was Stopped

There's a growing advertising trend in baseball. Crowds were brought to the usually barren St. Louise ball park, the last time the Yanks were there, by advertisements saying, in effect, "Come out to the park and see if Joe DiMaggio can prolong his batting record." The other night in Cincinnati, before the Reds-Dodgers game, a big fireworks display featured a pyrotechnical ad which sputtered out: "Giants here Wednesday night" . . . Speaking of DiMag's streak, he tells me that he lost all interest in it after breaking Keeler's record, and that it was a great relief to him—rather than a disappointment—when he was finally stopped. Joe is out after Ted Williams' batting leadership now, and believes that the absence of a streak will help him, because he won't let down instinctively after getting one hit.

Billy Soose is an honest sort. The middleweight champ believes he lost face when he won the title from Ken Overlin in that much belabored match. He says he won't feel as if he's really the champ until he beats Georgie Abrams, who beat him twice, and then gives Overlin a sounder thrashing. The Jacobs beachcombers believe Manager Paul Moss is a sap to put Soose in there with Abrams, who nearly knocked out Billy the last time they fought. Billy, up to 167 pounds now, wants the fight, which will be held next Wednesday at the Garden. . . . Abrams, by the way, will be the first Washington, D. C., fighter ever to appear in a main event at the Garden.

Far from incidentally, Abrams is now a boatswain's mate, first class, stationed at the Naval Air Station, Jacksonville. He wants to become a patrol bomber pilot. Curiously enough, for a fighter, he was born on Armistice Day. The middle name of this man of the seas is Freedom.

Night Ball for the Bosox?

Speaking of Gene Tunney, the former champion has designed a new set of uniforms for tars. . . . That was smart of the P. G. A. to crack down on gambling at pro tournaments. It went too far at the $5,000 Chicago Open last week. The host club practically ran a mutuel window on the players. . . . Wilbur Shaw, the race driver who has recovered completely from his Memorial Day race accident, believes on the other hand that the Indianapolis Speedway should sell mutuel tickets on that gasoline derby. . . . Tom Yawkey has made an extensive study of night baseball and probably will yield to the spell of the mazdas next year. . . . Looks like Bobby Riggs will win back the tennis crown Don McNeill knocked off his skull last year. Bob Pastor is still an excellent drawing card on the Coast, where he has never turned in a bad fight. Strange as it sounds, a Max Baer-Pastor fight on the Coast would draw a lot of money.

The Yanks ought to be good for two or three more pennants, with crack Newark kids like Outfielder Ed Kelleher, Hank Borowy and Catcher Ken Seas coming up. . . . Jake Powell has looked so good at Montreal that he'll probably be the next thumb thrust into the leaking Dodger dam. . . . Television is about to be set back ten years. . . . What are the Dodgers going to do when the Cards start their annual stretch drive? Except bellyache.

Welsh Upset, Leavens Loses in W. Va. Tennis

Champion Bows to Alex Guerry, Tarheel Star, While Harris Everett Puts Out Leavens

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 25.—Defending Champion Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Md., was the victim of a major upset today in the semifinals of the West Virginia Open tennis tournament as he lost out to fourth-seeded Alex Guerry, jr., of Sewanee, Tenn., 6—3, 6—4.

The tall Maryland attorney was unable to cope with the softball skill of the Southern collegian in making a bid for his fifth straight championship.

The Indiana player will battle Helen Marlowe, of Los Angeles, Calif., for the title relinquished by Gracyne Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif.

Welsh first won the title in 1935 and five of the years since then—four of them in a row—he won out in the finals against out-of-State opponents. In 1936, the championship went to George Judson, of Arizona.

Miss Boll was the lone West Virginian remaining in the tournament as Miss Marlowe earlier defeated Ann Miller Spilman, of Charleston, State closed champion, 6—3, 6—1.

Guerry will meet Harris Everett, of Jacksonville, Fla., in the finals tomorrow. Both are students at the University of North Carolina. They have met in tourney play once before, in 1940 at Pinehurst, N. C., when Guerry outlasted Everett.

Everett was hard pressed in overcoming Don Leavens, of Washington, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1, in the semifinals this morning.

Welsh and Leavens teamed in the semifinals of the men's doubles to oust Bob Leitch, of Richmond, Va., and Joe Scherr, of Cincinnati, 6—1, 6—3, while Everett and Guerry eliminated Delos (Deacon) Parsons and Byron Wilkinson, of Huntington, 6—2, 6—1.

Megaw-Geib Duo Captures Pin Match

Reds Megaw and El Geib, representing the Queen Pin Alleys, won a special match last night at Spillway from the twosome of Cletus Pannell and Nick Rinaldi, the final score being 1,282 to 1,183. Sponsored by the Southeast Business men's Association for the benefit of the United Service Organizations, the match drew over a hundred spectators who contributed close to $20 to the fund. Both the winners, Geib and Megaw, had identical games of 153 with the latter totaling 666 for the five-game block. Rinaldi topped the Spillway team with his 147-619 with Pannell posting scores of 126-564.

Lorraine Gulli, with her team that won the championship of the Washington Ladies' League, will be the guests of the Brookland Recreation girls' team tonight at 8 o'clock. Miss Gulli will depend on Catherine Quigley, Jessie Sacrey, Virginia Wiltbank and "Bing" Moen, while the Brookland team is comprised of Evelyn Sebastian, Donna May Mulquin, Hope Wilkinson, Mary Norris and Ruth King. Spectators are invited.

Caroline Hiser, rolling in place of Mabelle Hering led the Anacostia Spillway girls to a victory over the Brookland Recreation team, winning two games out of three. Final score was 1,639 to 1,572.

Bel Air, Md., July 25.—Vanned here from the Empire City track, where he finished seventh last Wednesday, Mrs. Veader Leonard's Mightily overcame a poor getaway to win the Bradshaw Purse, today's feature race. The 6-year-old gelding saddled by Don Yates and ridden by Jockey W. Werber, circled the field at the far turn and came on to fight his way back to a neck victory over C. M. Feltner's Dulie. Three lengths behind the battle for first money came M. B. Goss' Hot Man to be third in the field of seven operating at a mile.

With Miss Brideaux installed the favorite in the group, Mightily paid his backers at the rate of $8.70 for the usual deuce. He was clocked in 1:39 2-5 over a fast track. A crowd of 7,000 reported for the action staged under a blazing sun.

Dulie was first to show in front when Starter Ira Gregory pushed the button. Blue Covert and Miss Brideaux raced closest to the ground-saving pacemaker as the field went into the backstretch. In the meanwhile Mightily was being urged by Jockey Weber while running in last position.

Dulie Opens Lead

At the far turn Mightily began to respond and Weber went wide for racing room. Dulie opened a good lead but Mightily swung after the pacemaker. In the stretch the two hooked up in a duel. It was a hard battle that thrilled the crowd. In the closing stages, Mightily had the best punch left although Jockey A. Laturco never let up on Dulie.

A pair of well played horses figured in the daily double which brought a large part of the crowd into a $28.60 pay off. In the first race, R. W. Hullcoat's Bay Acre came through on the inside to defeat Ingerfire. Bay Acre, capably handled by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, paid $8. In the second race, W. W. Waters' Cartel had clear sailing while Easter Rabbit, the favorite, was bumped early, and came through with a victory. Cartel was a $7.70 shot.

The fastest races of the day came in the seventh and eighth events. R. M. Jerman's Playmore set a new track record for a mile and a sixteenth in the seventh, hanging up time of 1:48 3-5 to send into discard the 1:46 mark established by Wayriel. Playmore was ridden by Apprentice W. Rudert and it was the first winner of the boy's saddle career. Playmore led Trostar and Frank H. to the wire and paid $13.

Mrs. V. P. Noyes' Match Point, a consistent 7-year-old son of Challenger II, set a new track record for a mile and a furlong in the eighth race. The veteran was clocked in 1:54 2-5, knocking two-fifths off the mark set by Spotless.

Match Point won three parts of a length over the favored Rhodium, with Stand Alone third in a field of seven.

Pink Gal Takes Arlington Feature

Chicago, July 25 (AP).—The Arcturus Stable's Pink Gal, with Lee Haskell up, came with a rush in the stretch today to defeat Mrs. L. B. Muschal's Cherry Trifle by a half length in the War Admiral event—run as the sixth race at Arlington Park.

Valdina Farm's Viscounty, the favorite, and Forever Prince ran to a dead heat for the show end of the purse.

The winner paid $12.20 to win, $4.20 to place and $2.80 to show, and covered the mile and an eighth in 1:51 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARTEL, $7.70, $4.10, $3.60; EASTER RABBIT, $3.80, $3.00; HEPZIBAH, $5.80.

CARTEL, off in the first flight, took command over GYPSY PLAYER on the backstretch and drew out to hold sway thereafter. EASTER RABBIT was shuffled to last going into the first turn, took the wide route and hung after reaching contention. HEPZIBAH showed a good even effort.

Daily double, BAY ACRE and CARTEL, paid $28.60.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; claiming steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:12. Off at 3:14½. Winner, H. G. Pocock's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED TRAP, $41.20, $20.90, $9.30; WORTHFUL, $26.80, $11.70; RUNNING POOL, $6.60.

RED TRAP, allowed to race on his own courage early, came between horses to take command after a mile and drew out gradually to win easily. WORTHFUL made a poor landing at the first fence, was last at the fourth fence, worked his way to contention steadily and hung in the closing quarter. RUNNING POOL saved ground while setting and forcing the pace and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:48½. Winner, D. Galotta's b. c. (3), by Caruso—Real Lady. Trained by V. Arthur. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:27⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REAL BOY, $15.50, $7.50, $5.50; BUTCHER BOY, $7.00, $4.20; WENUIT, $5.20.

REAL BOY went to contention with a bold rush on the backstretch, wore down BUTCHER BOY on the outside and drew out under driving tactics in the final stages. BUTCHER BOY, on the outside, drew out under driving tactics in the final stages. He saved much ground to set the pace and held on gamely. WENUIT was hard ridden and had no excuses. LONG LEGS raced wide throughout.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:18¼. Winner, E. Brining's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAY OUT, $9.10, $5.90, $4.60; LULA KHAYYAM, $11.10, $6.60; SMALL CHANGE, $6.90.

WAY OUT, steadied along close up to the far turn, responded to take command when placed to a drive and closed with good energy. LULA KHAYYAM had been speed from the start, raced SMALL CHANGE into defeat and held on gamely. SMALL CHANGE set and forced the pace and was weakening at the close. TIME PASSES was shuffled back early and showed an excellent effort thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:49⅘. Winner, Mrs. Veader Leonard's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIGHTILY, $8.70, $5.10, $3.30; DULIE, $5.00, $3.00; HOT MAN, $3.40.

MIGHTILY, very sluggish early, came around the leaders with a bold rush at the far turn and were down DULIE in the closing test. DULIE saved ground while getting the pace and drew out, but could not resist the winner while under strong handling. HOT MAN saved ground turning for home and came willingly at the end. MISS BRIDEAUX was well placed to the stretch and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:18. Winner, R. M. Jerman's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAYMORE, $13.00, $6.80, $4.20; TROSTAR, $9.80, $5.60; FRANK H., $3.20.

PLAYMORE was slow to begin, worked his way to contention on the outside, wore down FRANK H. and held sway thereafter. TROSTAR gained with a rush through the stretch to show a good effort. FRANK H. set a good pace and tired when displaced. BLOX closed willingly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:48. Off at 5:49⅘. Winner, Mrs. V. P. Noyes' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MATCH POINT, $6.00, $3.00, $2.70; RHODIUM, $2.80, $2.50; STAND ALONE, $3.00.

MATCH POINT went to the front in the opening furlong, was nicely rated, withstood stretch challenges from RHODIUM and held sway under a drive to the end. RHODIUM was rated while in the first flight, responded when shaken up, but weakened slightly in the final 20 yards. STAND ALONE was sluggish early and came boldly entering the stretch, but tired. CHAINWICK was closest to the pace early and tired.

Selections at Bel Air

Dear Al:

Manager Bryson said yesterday that before another season he will have a full-size totalisator at this track. The one used now is a midget type which works O. K. but is not fast enough to keep up with $200,000 betting on a big day. By the way, I said yesterday that Bryson drew the plans for the new clubhouse. I was wrong. They were drawn by John Wells, who is an architect by trade and is track superintendent in his spare moments. Wells, it was, who turned the steel stands around at Tropical Park. The jumper Flemar was the favorite when he threw Jockey John Bosley, jr., on the way into the infield. All money was refunded. I still say this is unfair to those who wagered on other horses. The rule is that a horse on the track is in the starter's hands and bets go. J. C. Crivella, trainer of Shotagain, was fined $25 for failing to report a rider for the horse. Danny Scocca, who will ride any horse, took the mount. Shotagin would have gone better in a Tom Collins. It was hot enough at the track to fry horses. If Bel Air wants to do something constructive it should eliminate the hill in the chute. The horses stagger into each other on the slope. I thought I saw sparks flying from a certain horse yesterday, but maybe they were just heat waves. Charlie Shaw, representing the Cedar Farm Stable, has purchased He Rolls from Victor Noyes. He Rolls won the Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn last winter, Jockey Willie Kelly swung into serious action again and turned in a masterful ride on Edgar Brining's Way Out. Dashing Doe, prominent in Charles Town racing, arrived from New York, where she was disqualified out of third money last Monday. Trainer George Cook says Walter Haight is doing real good. Goes next week in a maiden race. Cook is temporarily handling the book of Jockey A. Laturco, who rode Specify when that horse was good. Laturco has ridden 73 winners this year and stands fourteenth on the list of leading riders. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—GOOD GRASS failed us at Hagerstown. Gets ten pounds from the two leading contenders in this field and I'm going to string along. HAPPY SLAVE was a winner at the other town and is dangerous. TIN CAN to take care of the others.

Second race—TAVERN seems well placed in this field. Needs only to run his race. TRANSDAY is better than recent races. COUNORA is an honest sort and promises to be in the thick of contention.

Third race—FLYCATCHER showed a fair race at Delaware and is a threat. I'm going to string along. WAR PORT set all the pace the other day and may hang on longer in this field. TAM O'SHANTER knows the course.

Fourth race—PURPORT likes this track. Shapes up well under light weight. SKY HOSTESS had a mishap last out but is reported to be in shape. RED IDOL and REMOLEE are possibilities.

Fifth race—WALTER LIGHT did everything asked at Hagerstown and is the natural choice in this field. Has a fine running mate in BLUSTERING on the reserve list. DIVIDEND and BECOMLY are dangerous contenders.

Sixth race—GOLD SWEEP is in excellent shape and deserves the top ranking in this field. DRESSMAKER is better than generally rated and is a possible surprise. LEONARDTOWN belongs close.

Seventh race—FLAG ETTA has been stopping in recent races but is dropping down here and may not be caught. CHANNING has plenty of late punch and the long stretch here suits. PHALARIS GIRL may cause an upset.

Eighth race—WORTHOWNING, despite too much work of late, will be hard to beat if sent postward in this. ALMAC is dangerous off recent races. Here's a pair of long shots with good chances—STEPPING IN and PRINCESS LADY.

Best bet—Gold Sweep.

CLOCKER MIKE SELECTIONS

2—Crooked Lass, Transday, Lady Timerole.

Kavakos Defeats May Hardware

Kavakos Grill won its third straight victory of the second half Capital City League competition last night at Washington Softball Stadium as "Cannonball" Jack Smith hurled five-hit shutout ball to whip May Hardware, 6-0. The victory pushed the Grillmen into undisputed possession of first place, half game ahead of Fat Boy, which won its two games.

Yellow Cab, of the Capital City League, outslugged Greenbelt, of the National Night League, 9-6, in the finale. George Adriani and Danny (Beer) Bock hit homers for the Cabbies as did Playing Manager Ben Goldfadden of Greenbelt.

Sloan Assails Order to Cut Auto Output

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—General Motors delivered $75,200,000 worth of defense goods in the June quarter, bringing its total deliveries to $205,500,000 and has around one billion two-hundred million dollars contracts on hand.

MR. SLOAN

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, said today the tremendous backlog would mean constantly expanding defense production as new facilities were finished.

He was emphatic in declaring "any reduction in the production of the automotive industry cannot possibly result in any measurable acceleration in the production of materials for national defense so far as General Motors operations are concerned."

"The greater part of the current volume," the motor maker said, "naturally is made up of those products for which basic manufacturing facilities existed or were under development at the inception of the national defense program . . . In these categories are Diesel engines, military trucks and Allison aircraft engines.

Cites New Equipment

"But, in addition, production and deliveries of materials are under way in the case of a number of entirely new projects which originated less than a year ago . . . Included are machine guns, specialized electrical equipment, tank gun mounts, shells, cartridge cases, fuses, airplane control and instrument equipment, and many other products of a technical nature.

"Further tooling operations and factory construction are being pushed to completion in the case of still other projects more recently assigned . . ."

He estimated 75 per cent of the present billion-dollar backlog of orders called for machinery outside the corporation's normal activities and that 90 per cent of it was outside normal automotive industry production. The remaining 10 per cent was made up of military trucks.

Workers Face Idleness

Sloan said a sharp reduction in automobile production would "in all likelihood result in the temporary unemployment of large numbers" of the 250,000 hourly wage earners General Motors employs. He said 36,000 of them were in direct defense work.

"It is inevitable that this relationship between defense production workers and those workers involved in civilian production will begin to change rapidly as the new plants commence to produce. Thus the number of workers engaged in civilian production will begin to change rapidly as the new plants commence to produce. Thus the number of workers engaged in civilian production is likely to decline. This is because, as the program becomes intensified, the materials that might otherwise be used in the normal activities of the automotive industry may be required, in part for national defense, to what extent is unknown.

"The peak of defense production by General Motors as measured by obligations already assumed or under negotiation, cannot be reached until toward the end of 1942. . . ."

Plants Being Built

Plants under construction, he continued, are only beginning to reach the point when they can absorb materials and employ workers. Other plants are just being started.

Sloan said that in May General Motors agreed to limit 1942 model production to 78½ per cent of that of 1941 and said that was equivalent to a cut of about 35 per cent from the level of 1941's first quarter.

"Should the relationship of the 1942 model production as compared with that of 1941 be established at 50 per cent instead of 78½ per cent, in that event the reduction would be equivalent to nearly 60 per cent as compared with the production level of the first quarter of 1941," he said.

"The management of General Motors, from the inception of the national defense program . . . has recognized that the time inevitably must come—as the program continues to expand—when sacrifices will become essential.

"Then they must be accepted to the full degree necessary, as patriotic duty to a very just cause. And the need of such sacrifices must be judged by demonstrated shortages of management, materials, workers, supporting services and other economic resources, as they actually develop in the area of defense production. . . ."

Spring Lamb Crop Largest on Record

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday the 1941 lamb crop was the largest on record, totalling 34,549,000 head, an increase of 5 per cent over the record crop of 1940 and 13 per cent more than the ten-year period from 1930-39 average.

The crop in the 13 Western sheep States was placed at 22,723,000 head. The number in the so-called native States—those east of the Rockies—was reported at 11,826,000 head.

Buying Orders Go Begging in Cotton and Silk

By the Associated Press

Cotton and silk futures prices climbed steeply yesterday in a generally higher commodity market that saw buying orders go begging much of the time.

Tension and war clouds in the Far East, inflationary tendencies, crop shortages and weather were called factors.

Silk opened up the limit, 25 cents a pound, and clung there with buyers taking their turns as scattered offerings were made. Spot silk was up 35½ cents a pound.

Cotton rose $2.10 to $2.35 a bale on reports it was unlikely the Government would release its loan stocks and on tales of a short crop because of weather and insect damage.

Cottonseed oil gained .13 to .18 of a cent a pound on firmness in cotton and lard prices.

World sugar futures led most imports higher with gains of .8 to .10½ cents a pound. Straits tin was .60 to 1.10 cents a pound higher, cocoa gained about 1-5 cent a pound, rubber was unchanged to ¼ cent a pound up.

Wool tops rose 1 to 1.1 cents a pound and hides gained .12 of a cent a pound.

The domestic sugar price was steady and coffee futures showed the only loss of the day with a drop in Santos of 1-10 to 1-5 cent a pound.

The Associated Press index of 35 staple cash commodities rose to 90.10 per cent of the 1926 average for its highest mark since July 30, 1937, against 89.86 per cent the day before.

Storage Lacking, Wheat Growers Face Loan Delay

By the Associated Press

Agriculture Department officials said yesterday that because of a shortage of acceptable commercial and farm storage facilities, thousands of growers will be unable to secure Government loans on their wheat before late fall or early winter.

Until consumption cuts down the record wheat supply and thereby releases storage space, officials said, between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 bushels of this year's bumper crop will have to be kept on the farms.

To be eligible for a loan, wheat must be stored in certified commercial storage or in approved bins or granaries of the farm. Many farmers prefer to put their grain under loan than to sell it, because the loan rate, which averages 98 cents a bushel on the farm, is above current market prices.

The storage problem has been complicated, officials said, by the fact that some elevator operators are refusing to accept wheat for storage under loan. They were said to prefer to limit their business to commercial grain—a type of business which generally affords them a larger return because of a more frequent turnover of grain. Officials said there was little they could do about this.

U. S. Cotton Holdings Total 6,126,482 Bales

New York, July 25 (AP).—A New York Cotton Exchange survey on the staple stored under the Federal loan account today showed that as of May 31 the Commodity Credit Corporation, a Federal agency, held 6,126,482 bales from the 1934 and 1937 crops.

Although no figures were available, it was understood that these holdings were composed of high average quality cotton.

As a result of the high rate of domestic consumption in recent months, stocks of 1938, 1939 and 1940 loan cotton have been reduced to less than one million bales, according to the cotton exchange.

No. American Aviation Votes 75c Dividend

Dallas, July 25 (AP).—A dividend of 75 cents per share on its common stock payable on August 20 to stockholders of record August 7, was declared by North American Aviation, Inc., directors at a meeting today.

J. H. Kindelberger, president, said sales during the six months ended June 30, 1941, amounted to $36,020,650.39, as compared with $14,578,317.10 for the first six months of 1940.

For the six-month period, the company had a consolidated net profit of $3,900,744.95 after provision for estimated Federal income and excess profit taxes.

Portland Cement Output Gains 22%

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that the Portland Cement industry in June produced 15,222,000 barrels, shipped 16,109,0000 from mills and had 21,863,000 in stock at the ende of the month.

Production and shipment were up 21.9 and 21.8 per cent, respectively, compared with June, 1940, while stocks at mills were 8.9 per cent lower than a year ago.

Capital Transit Net Gains 29% During June

Reflecting sharply heavier passenger traffic, net income of the Capital Transit Co. in June advanced 29 per cent over the same month last year. The comparative profit figures in June for 1941 and 1940 were $117,723 and $91,220, according to the monthly report filed with the Public Utilities Commission.

Revenue passenger total last month was 18,404,971, a gain of 3,244,948 over the figure for the same 1940 month. June operating revenue totaled $1,292,882, a 23 per cent increase over the $1,051,003 chalked up in 1940. Operating expenses, taxes and depreciation aggregated $1,146,221, a 24 per cent gain over last year.

Net income for the first six months this year was reported at $645,441, a 64 per cent increase over the $393,266 in the same 1940 period. Revenue passenger total in the first half was 107,527,241, a 17.6 per cent gain over the 91,470,581 in the first six months of 1940.

D. C. Stores Stock Heavily

Washington department stores are stocking up heavily in anticipation of shortages in the future, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond indicated in its monthly report last night.

Outstanding orders of local stores on June 30 were 119 per cent heavier than on the same date last year, the survey showed. Stocks on hand on the same date were 15 per cent more than last year.

As reported previously, D. C. department store sales in the first six months were 20 per cent heavier than in the same 1940 period.

The survey also showed that the D. C. percentage of collections in June to accounts receivable on June 1 were 29 per cent, slightly less than the area's figure of 31 per cent.

Cable Work Started in Area

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. yesterday announced that it had begun construction of an additional long-distance cable between Harrisburg, Pa., and Baltimore, to supplement the present aerial cable between these two cities. The new cable will take care of the rapid increase in traffic, particularly to and from Washington, which has arisen during the past year due to national defense activities.

The cable will cost an estimated one million dollars and is expected to be ready for service this fall.

A large part of the cable throughout the 80 miles will be buried by the plowing-in method now in general use in the Bell System.

One advantage of the proposed cable is that it will give additional protection to Washington in case of any emergency on the existing direct route between New York and Baltimore, officials here said.

U. S. Oil Supply Declines in May

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday a 1,134,000-barrel decrease during May in total stocks of all oils.

Supplies amounted to 555,623,000 barrels, or 131 days' requirement on May 31, compared with 556,757,000 barrels for 132 days on April 30.

May 31 stocks were 8,171,000 barrels less than for the same month last year. Total demand for all oils rose from 126,953,000 barrels in April to 131,414,000 barrels on May 31, of which 10,730,000 barrels were for export.

Brokers' Loans Drop $30,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled 333 million dollars. The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of 30 million dollars when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled 288 million dollars.

Stock Market Wavers, Turns Unevenly Lower As Clouds in Far East Dampen Buying Urge

New York, July 25.—Securities markets were crowded out of the speculative picture today by soaring cotton and import commodities.

While the widening rift between the United States and Japan over the latter's move in Indo-China apparently dampened the buying urge for stocks, it conversely stimulated demand for staples that would be affected by embargoes and tied-up shipping in the Pacific if the Oriental situation becomes worse.

Specialties still clung to modest advances in the stock list but leaders slipped fractions to a point or so. There were a few setbacks of as much as 3.

Lowering clouds in the Far East held most of the attention of boardrooms although the generally favorable business outlook at home, including a batch of pleasing dividends and earnings statements, served to bring in support for individual stocks. Wall Street hoped for the best in the German-Russian conflict but seemingly was unwilling to make a definite forecast on the basis of communiques.

The share division was no worse than mildly mixed until the President announced definite retaliatory action against the Japanese military shift to the south would be taken tomorrow. Prices then began to waver but, except for scattered instances, weakness was a rarity at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .3 of a point at 43.6, its third successive decline. The composite was back to its level of last Saturday.

Sizable trades in low-priced issues accounted for much of the turnover of 809,030 shares which compared with 623,840 yesterday. One block of 47,200 shares of United Corporation common sold at ½, down ⅛.

Among retreating stocks were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, Du Pont, American Telephone, Anaconda and Santa Fe.

General motors was up a shade and Chrysler unchanged as the OPM agreed that August curtailment in production should hold to 20 per cent instead of the cut of 50 per cent demanded by OPACS. New York Shipbuilding, Electric Boat and Bath Iron Works edged forward as the need for more ocean tonnage was stressed by international developments.

Improvement was retained by American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, South American Gold & Platinum, Nash-Kelvinator, Jones & Laughlin preferred and South Porto Rico Sugar.

In an uneven Curb gainers included Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal, Pennroad and N. J. Zinc. In the losing column were American Gas, Electric Bond & Share, Brewster Aero and Humble Oil. Dealings here amounted to about 139,000 shares versus 116,000 Thursday.

New York Cotton

New York, July 25 (AP).—Rumors that Government loan stocks might be frozen stimulated cotton futures upward today and active trade and speculative buying raised prices $2.10 to $2.35 a bale. Another rumor was that the parity basis might be boosted to make loan value around 18.70 cents a pound. Weather and weevil complaints reported by some circles were other factors.

Senator E. D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said a rider attached to wheat marketing legislation would prevent Government cotton loan stocks from breaking the cotton market by freezing them in the status quo.

Some disappointment was expressed over the cautious trading pace maintained in the Worth Street gray goods market.

Japan's Bonds Break 5 to 12, Set New Lows

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Further wide losses in Japanese bonds, in some cases more than 20 per cent of the quoted value, had an unsettling effect in all sections of today's bond market.

The second straight day of sharp declines in obligations of the Far Eastern power obviously was based on extreme nervousness caused by fast moving political developments. As on Thursday, the turnover in the dozen or so issues involved was negligible and brokers said it was all but impossible at times to find buyers at any price.

The heaviest losers, most of which touched the lowest price since issuance, were: Japan 5½s, off 12 at 43; the 6½s, off 8¼ at 55; Yokohoma 6s, off 8¼ at 40¼; Oriental Development 6s, off 6 at 33, and Tokyo Electric Light 6s, off 5½ at 34.

German bonds were a shade improved as were some South Americans.

In the domestic list price changes were narrow and the trend irregularly lower. On the offside at the close were Southern Railway 4s, Southern Pacific 4½s, Northern Pacific 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Portland General Electric 4½s and International Telephone debenture 4½s.

Up a little were Santa Fe 4s at 110½, Rock Island General 4s at 23⅜, Detroit Edison 3s at 107 and Western Union 4½s at 85.

U. S. Governments were quiet but retained a steady undertone on both the stock exchange and over the counter. Small gainers outnumbered declines by a slight margin.

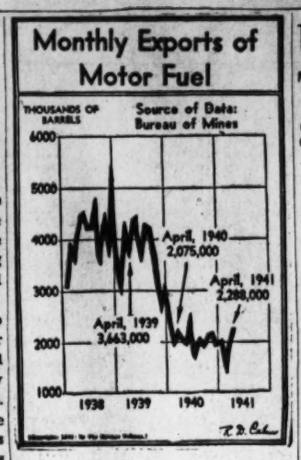
Total sales of $6,846,100, par value, compared with $7,294,175 the day before.

C. N. R. Workers to Get 'Cost of Living' Bonus

Montreal, July 25 (Canadian Press).—The question of a war-time cost of living bonus for employes of Canadian National Railways "will be settled very soon to the satisfaction of all concerned," R. C. Vaughan, newly-appointed president of the system, said today.

He made no estimate of how much the bonus would cost but said it was expected to run into "several millions of dollars a year."

The president announced that the system hoped this year to pay all interest on C. N. R. bonds held by the public and said that, if this hope were realized, it would be the first time since 1929 that all interest had been paid in full.



Price Trend Up As Retail Sales Continue Leap

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Apparel buying slackened a bit in some stores this week, but retail stores averaged 20 to 24 per cent above last week for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

"Retailers' reports indicated a more uneven day-to-day movement of trade as the first signs of a summer lull appeared in apparel lines," the credit agency said.

"Strength in prices was apparent not only in smaller reductions on clearance merchandise, but also in moderate increases on new season goods," the agency continued. "Only in scattered instances was any resistance to price advances noted.

"At midsummer sales of furs, cloth coats and home furnishings it was found that customers were usually inclined to 'trade up' in their purchases even with the somewhat higher prices in effect. Retailers were watching these events closely for a gauge of consumer reaction. So far results were said to be quite spotty, with some disappointing days alternating with exceptionally good ones.

"A tendency among consumers to purchase ahead on many requirements continued to be observed."

Banks' Idle Cash Drops 160 Million

Federal borrowing tumbled lendable excess reserves of banks by 160 million dollars during the week ended June 23, bringing the supply of idle money down to $5,180,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board said the principal factor in the decline was the sale by the Treasury of 200 million dollars worth of Commodity Credit Corporation notes.

U. S. Exports To Japan at 8-Year Low

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department disclosed yesterday that trade with Japan fell to an eight-year low in May, in advance of the present flare-up over Indo-China.

American exports to Japan in May totaled only $6,621,000, which was the lowest for any month since the depression year of 1933. How much of this decline was due to curtailed shipments of oil, metals, machinery and other war materials could not be learned, however, because the department recently stopped publication of such figures.

Half of Last Year's

The May total of exports to Japan compared with $8,419,000 in April, and $13,687,000 in May of last year. For the first five months of this year, exports to Japan amounted to $47,848,000, barely more than half the $91,871.000 in the similar period last year.

These figures were made public by the Commerce Department as part of a geographical analysis of total United States foreign trade in May.

The report also showed that American imports from Japan, amounting to $10,869,000 in May, also were somewhat under April figures, which were $11,020,000. The May imports from Japan, however, contained little more than silk, which accounted for $7,870,000 of the total.

Latin America Trade Up

The report also showed that exports to Latin American countries rose to 85 million dollars in May, and were the highest for any month since the beginning of the war. This was 14 per cent more than April, and was due primarily to larger shipments to Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, Mexico and Venezuela. Imports from Latin America were 95 million dollars. While among the highest in recent months, this figure was slightly below April. The bulk of American trade, however, continued to center in the British Empire. The empire took 247 million dollars of American exports in May, or approximately 64 per cent of the total. They were seven million dollars smaller than in April, however. Imports from the empire totaled 129 million dollars, and were 12 million dollars higher.

Although Russia was on the brink of war with Germany at that time, its purchases here slumped suddenly from $5,186,000 in April to only $212,000 in May.

Hughes Again Defeats Reds For Phils, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 25.—Rookie Tommy Hughes of the Phillies again proved too much for the Cincinnati Reds today, adding a 4-3 decision to the shutout he gave the world champions the last time they met. Except for the three scattered instances when the Reds managed to peck across their runs, Hughes kept the ball away from the slugging area over home plate and had the champions popping and grounding out with regularity.

Meanwhile his mates, baffled at first by Johnny Vander Meer, came from behind with a three-run rally in the seventh to win. The outbreak started with Vandy's first pass of the game. A single and sacrifice followed and Merrill May singled in two runs. Bob Bragan's double scored the third.

Old Cy Young, who collected 510 decisions in a 22-year baseball lifetime, heads the list while the great Walter Johnson, who notched 413 victories in 21 years of campaigning is next in line. Alexander and Christy Matthewson both achieved 373 triumphs, the former requiring two decades in the process while "Matty" made his mark in 17 years.

Eddie Plank, only remaining "modern" in the list, won 325 games during his 17 years of service.

Grove Got Shaky Start

Grove's dramatic victory came in his seventeenth year of major league duty and was his seventh victory of the season against four defeats.

But don't ever forget! The old guy won 111 games, all but three for the Baltimore International League team—pretty tough company—before he ever had a taste of big league combat.

He broke in with Philadelphia in 1923, after reportedly being purchased for $105,000 from Baltimore. Wildness marred his earlier efforts but when once he harnessed the power of his whipcord arm he was the fireball terror of the American League.

From 1925 through the 1933 season he amassed the staggering total of 195 victories and 79 defeats. That winter he was sold to the Red Sox in a huge player and cash trade with the Grovian price tag being approximated at $125,000.

Lefty Pulls Up Lame

Grove pulled up lame the following spring with the first sore arm of his career but he managed to collect an 8-8 record for 1934. He rallied in the next few seasons and became a dependable Sox hurler until the middle of the 1938 season when the great left arm went completely dead.

But there was nothing wrong with "Lefty's" heart and he came back again in 1939 to collect 15 victories and drop only 4.

Time has been creeping up on Old Mose ever since but he's managed to eke out his victories and today he gained his heart's desire.

American Rowers Near a Sweep In Royal Canadian Regatta

Art Gallagher, of Penn A. C., Buffalo Team, Score Victories; Henley Closes Today

By the Associated Press

Port Dalhousie, Canada, July 25.—Rowers from the United States made almost a clean sweep of the second day's events in the fifty-ninth annual Royal Canadian Henley regatta.

Art Gallagher, representing the Penn A. C. of Philadelphia, won the association singles, while the Buffalo Westsides, 1940 aggregate champions, closed the day's racing with a clear 22-point lead over the second-place Toronto Argonauts. The Henley ends tomorrow.

Gallagher, who yesterday rowed to a dead heat with Harvey Hutcheon, of St. Catherines, Ontario, crossed the finish line today three lengths in front of W. Bostick, of the Philadelphia Undine Barge Club. Jake Gaudaur, of the Hamilton Leanders, was third.

Buffalo Swamps Rivals

Joe Angyal, of Ravenswood, N. Y., runner-up to United States National Amateur Champion Theo DuBois, of Winnipeg, didn't enter today's race, apparently saving himself for the championship singles tomorrow.

The Westsides and the Argonauts finished the first day's racing with 19 points each. Young Jack Mahoney put the Argos into a temporary lead when he won today's first event, the junior 140-pound singles, but from there on the Buffalo boys swamped their rivals.

Starting with a two-length victory in the 150-pound eights, the Westsides followed up with a handy victory over Detroit in the junior 140-pound doubles, in which they took advantage of an erratic course steered by the Detroit pair.

Another Buffalo pair, Ed Atwill and Jim Hogan, kept up the good work with a victory in the junior heavy doubles, and then the Westsides completed the day's haul with triumphs both in the intermediate 150-pound fours and the intermediate fours, winning the latter event by only six feet over the Argonauts.

Detroit Scores

Hutcheon won the quarter-mile open singles from Gallagher in a highly unsatisfactory manner. Three attempts were made to race the event, but there was a foul each time and the judges finally gave up in disgust and awarded the race to Hutcheon, who fouled once to Gallagher's twice.

The point standing tonight was Buffalo 64, Argonauts 41, Detroit 14, St. Catharines 13, Hamilton 10, Penn A. C. 8, Brockville 8, Ecorse 4, Lachine 3, Philadelphia Undines 3, and Belleville, N. J., 3.

Giants, Aided By Error, Beat Cubs, 5 to 2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 25.—The New York Giants punched across four runs in the first inning, all of them unearned because of an error by Babe Dahlgren, and rolled to a 5-to-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs today.

Left-handers had stopped the Giants four games in a row, but Southpaw Vern Olsen was the victim of today's uprising. With one out in the first, Burgess Whitehead and Morrie Arnovich singled. Then Mel Ott's grounder went through Dahlgren for an error and one run. Hank Danning forced Ott while another run tallied, and Babe Young and Dick Bartell followed with a pair of doubles, two runs scoring on Bartell's blow.

The Giants collected a final run in the ninth on a double by Ott and a single by Young.

Need of Fence Sent Grove Up

League. He burned up the league from the beginning, Dr. Morison, a local physician, recalls and local officials envisaged the makings of a great ball player.

Even though the local Blue Sox were doing well through the efforts of Grove, Wilson, Neun, and company, they were having the financial difficulties that practically all of the minor league teams of the pre-chain system era experienced. A new park had just been built and a fence costing $3,500 had been erected but not completely paid for.

With no other money in sight, Morison and Manager Louden decided to call on Jack Dunn of the Baltimore Orioles to look over the club to see if he would be interested in the purchase of any of the men. His son, Jack Dunn, jr., came to the city, watched the boys perform and immediately fell for Grove.

An agreement was reached whereby Grove would be taken by the Orioles for $2,000, Dr. Morison said. According to Louden's contract with the team, he was to get half of the selling price of any player, so the club got $1,000 and Louden got $1,000 for the sale of one of the game's greatest pitchers whom Dunn sold a few years later to the Philadelphia Athletics for $100,500.

only two hits, both by Bloodworth.

It was all of a sudden in the second inning that the Nats took their very temporary 2-0 lead. Two were out when Jake Early singled to center, and then it was that Bloodworth swung on a shiny new ball and sent it glistening far into the left field seats for his fourth homer of the year. He really slugged it.

Kenntdy gave those runs and one more right back to the Browns in the next inning after they filled the bases rather cheaply with none out. Heffner beat out a single off Kennedy's glove and Clift drew a walk. McQuinn bounced a ball off Vernon's glove for a single and Kennedy was in deep trouble.

A long fly to Cramer off Judnich's bat fetched Heffner home from third and moved Clift up a base. Whereupon Kennedy went into some kind of a trance, taking a long windup, on which McQuinn stole second unmolested. Cullenbine singled to left and the Browns had a 3-2 lead.

Kennedy did very well at keeping the Nats in the ball game thereafter until the seventh when he invited trouble by hitting Heffner with a pitched ball. Clift followed with a single to center, McQuinn contributed a long fly, Judnich lammed a two-bagger off the right field wall and the Browns had two runs for the inning and a 5-2 lead. Alex Carrasquel finally got the side out.

Meanwhile, the Nats were having a horrible time of it against Auker. From the third to the eighth only Bloodworth was able to hit safely. There appeared to be the makings of a run when Bloodworth opened the eighth with a single, but Pinch Hitter Sammy West flied out and Case and Cramer grounded out weakly.

Any ideas of a rousing ninth-inning rally vanished when Lewis and Travis were easy outs, but Mickey Vernon stopped the general exit with a long triple to center. Archie scored him with a single to center and there was new interest in the proceedings, but Early hit into a force play and everybody went home.

ODD BODKINS — By FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

LOOK AT THE FAN MAIL ODD GOT! READ THE WIRE FROM J. B. BORNUM, ODD!
THEATRE ENGAGEMENT AWAITS YOU. COME TO METROPOLIS AT ONCE. SURE YOU WILL STOP THE SHOW.
OH, HOW EXCITING! WHO IS MR. BORNUM?
PROBABLY A MEMBER OF THE LEAGUE OF DECENCY! AND IF HE WANTS ODD TO STOP A SHOW, IT'S ODDS DUTY!
I'LL MISS YOU, ODD!
I'LL MISS YOU TOO, GWEN! (GULP)
I ORDERED A NEW OUTFIT FOR ODD FROM THE MAIL ORDER HOUSE. HE'S GOT TO LOOK IMPORTANT!
YOU SAY IT'S AN ORDER FOR ITEMS A-1567 AND C-143? SOMEBODY MUST BE JOKING!
I DON'T THINK SO! THIS MONEY CAME WITH IT. AND IT'S REAL! I TRIED BITING IT!
MR. SWEARS BOBRUCK

JOE PALOOKA — No Fight — BY HAM FISHER

H'LO BRICK— I GOT REGARDS FOR YA FROM SOME OF THE BUNCH DOWN IN TOWN.
YEAH! AN' WHILE I'M UP HERE TRAININ' MY HEAD OFF AN' NO TIME TO READ THE PAPERS— WHAT DOES YOUR PUNK FRIEND PALOOKA PULL—7-26
—GONNA STAR IN THAT ARMY BOXIN' CARNIVAL AN' TAKE THE PLAY AWAY FROM MY FIGHT.'
NOW WAIT A MINITE. I SAW PHIL BOYLE. HE JUST COME UP FROM FORT DIX AN' SAYS JOE'S OUT OF IT.
HIS BUDDY RED RODNEY GOT HURT BAD— SAVED JOE'S LIFE—AN' JOE AST T'BE LET OUT OF FIGHTIN'— HE'S TOO—YA KNOW UPSET ABOUT RED—
WELL THAT'S GOOD. WHY A LOTTA THEM SAPPY FANS WOULD BE GOIN' T'SEE HIM— FER ONE REASON— TO HELP THE ARMY SHOW.
I WONDER HOW KNOBBY CAN STAND IT? YOU'D THINK HE'D BE SO FED UP HE'D BUST.
KNOBBY'S NO FOOL. HE'S PROB'LY BUILDIN' THAT BIRD UP TO A BEAUTIFUL LET-DOWN.

JANE ARDEN — Hot Clue — BY MONTE BARRETT AND RUSSELL ROSS

WHY SO EXCITED ABOUT A HAT? JUST BECAUSE IT DOESN'T FIT? OR BECAUSE IT HAS A BLOODSTAIN, WHEN FOUND ON A MURDERED MAN?
THIS CRIME WAS CAREFULLY PLANNED— EVERY CLUE ELIMINATED— NOTHING TO GO ON— UNTIL THE CRIMINAL HAD AN ACCIDENT—
IN THE STRUGGLE, HIS HAT FELL OFF—WAS STAINED WITH BLOOD— NOW, HE HAD TAKEN SO MANY PRECAUTIONS, HE WASN'T GOING TO OVER-LOOK THAT BLOOD STAIN—
SO WHAT DID HE DO? HE CHANGED HATS WITH HIS VICTIM— THE NEW HAT WAS TOO BIG FOR HIM, SO HE TORE STRIPS FROM THIS NEWSPAPER TO STUFF UNDER THE BAND— THAT EXPLAINS THAT—
BUT HE DIDN'T WANT US TO FIND HIS HAT, SO HE PUT IT ON THE DEAD MAN, HOPING IT WOULD THUS ESCAPE OUR NOTICE—
WHY DIDN'T HE WANT US TO NOTICE THAT HAT, INSPECTOR? LOOK AT IT—
HIS INITIALS ARE STAMPED IN IT—A.G.C.— HM—AND IT WAS BOUGHT AT FRANK BROTHERS, IN WOMAC, OHIO!

SUPERMAN — Seeing Double — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

SUPERMAN BRINGS "LIPPY" DOWN IN A FLYING TACKLE...
YOU—LIKE ALL MY OTHER IMITATORS— HAVE HAD THIS COMING FOR A LONG TIME!
UH—HHHH!!
HE MOVED OUT OF SIGHT A MOMENT TOO SOON— BUT PERHAPS I'LL HAVE ANOTHER CHANCE...!
AS CASEY AND THE OTHER OFFICERS DASH ONTO THE BUILDING'S ROOF, THEY ARE ASTOUNDED TO SEE....

When perfect attendance records on the air are being compiled, the probability is that the name of Albert N. Dennis, of WJSV, will be up at the top shining like a light.

For today his "Labor News Review" has its 365th consecutive airing over WJSV, with the record showing as it begins its eighth year that he hasn't missed a single broadcast in all that time.

To celebrate the occasion, the Washington Union Label League has had several thousand posters printed, calling attention to the anniversary, and had them distributed around to all government offices.

The Union Label League in Washington is composed of 175 organizations, with more than 130,000 members. In the note which went out with the posters, it said: "This is a public expression of appreciation for a valuable public service. This card is furnished by the Washington Union Label League, having been authorized by unanimous vote in regular meeting . . . As this splendid program begins its eighth year, without missing any regular weekly broadcast, this is our way of saying: 'Thanks for a valuable public service, rendered so long and so well that it has achieved a world record.'"

Contract Bridge

We can understand a player being too good, but most of us wouldn't think of a hand being too strong. Yet this hand, played in Glasgow recently, was so powerful that it kept North and his partner from reaching a slam. He opened these cards with two hearts:

♠ AK
♡ AKQ87
◇ A64
♣ AKQ

SOUTH
♠ 63
♡ 64
◇ J875
♣ 109865

South made a negative response of two no trump; he was afraid of mentioning the club suit as North might be misled. North jumped to four no trump, which was passed, and five no trump was made. Seven clubs would have succeeded but the bidding shouldn't have gone higher than a small slam in clubs as the trumps had to break, and South also needed a 3—3 heart division in order to discard three losing diamonds.

When the holder of the huge hand was complimented by his adversaries on his restraint in not bidding a slam, he replied:

"This was quite a satisfactory result. Big hands can easily cost points instead of gaining.

"I imagine there are some advanced systems which would produce the slam, but for the ordinary player these hands are an illustration of how preferable is a balanced partnership to one of such unequal distribution of strength that the weaker side is unable to give the least help."

14 Millionth Elevator Rider . . .

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Charles Herbert Kline, 10-month-old citizen of Hammonds Ferry, Baltimore, took fame with a grin, exposing two teeth here yesterday and rattled off his best acceptance speech, a solemn "Oooh."

Through the long odds of the particular seat taken by his mother, Mrs. Theresa Kline, on the bench where tourists wait their turns to ascend the Washington Monument, Charles became the 14 millionth to ride the elevator to the top of the Nation's No. 1 perch, since records were started on October 9, 1888.

Mrs. Kline was a close second, for she held Charles in her arms and thus a little ahead of herself. Thus he was declared the 14 millionth, while she took the number 14,000,001.

Behind them, and having immediate charge of Joan, 7, and Delores, 12, his daughters, was Papa Louis Kline, caught in the rush at the elevator door, and wondering what to go and see next, and how the Washington-Baltimore traffic would be later in the day. He was completely unbothered about his number.

Monument statisticians will have for the record that the 14 millionth person was toted into the elevator at 1:10 p. m.

CHARLES HERBERT KLINE AND MOTHER LOOK FROM MONUMENT WINDOW

The 13 millionth person, recorded June 8, 1940, was Miss Marjorie McKinney, 1726 Q Street Northwest, while Mrs. Angeline Drankie, 4930 South Hermitage Avenue, Chicago, on September 5, 1940, was the 17 millionth visitor, counting stair climbers and riders together.

Record year was 1937, with 1,207,000 visitors. The stair-climbing record for one day came on July 4, 1937, a count of 5,784. There was a total of 10,914 walkers and riders that day.

Lieut. Charles Herman, the custodian, gets enthusiastic when another million turns up, at his 555 feet 5⅛ inches of monument to the country's first President. He keeps a desk full of Monument memorabilia and doesn't seem bothered by a curious thing—that it's difficult to take the Monument's romance without chewing on a whole thick omelet of arithmetic.

As an example, in 1908, Gabby Street, Washington catcher, caught a ball thrown from the Monument's top which might have been just a good catch and enough of the matter. But statisticians went to work, submerging the catch in the calculation that the 5-ounce baseball had the impact of 117 pounds when it hit.

Concern for wearied knee joints in the climb of 898 steps turned into the calculation that a continuous climb requires 15 minutes, and climbing with halts to pant and puff takes 20 minutes.

In 1941 to date, 48,177 elected to walk; 465,161 thought better of it and took the elevator, one of whose operators once quit because the changes of altitude hurt his ears.

CAMP ERNEST W. BROWN

At Camp With Police Boys Club

No dusky priest squatting on the banks of the Nile in ancient Egypt ever worshipped his great sun god Ra more than do some 220 tanned and shorts-clad youngsters who daily court Old Sol at the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Camp Ernest W. Brown, on the banks of the Potomac in lower St. Marys County, Md.

Because last spring numerous Washingtonians dug down in their jeans and contributed to the Police Boys Club campaign fund, this summer more than 1,300 underprivileged youngsters will get needed vacations from city streets. And because of this generosity the camp has not had to turn down one eligible boy who asked to go. Camp Ernest W. Brown, which is named in honor of Washington's superintendent of police and founder of the Police Boys Club, is in its fifth season. There under the experienced direction of Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, the boys are taught clean living, fellowship and sports.

WARNER EILERTSON LIKES FRESH VEGETABLES

Each morning after being awakened by the notes of a bugle the youngsters pile out of their bunks and dash from their cabins ready for another exciting day. Yet they find time each morning and evening to gather around the flag and remember they are Americans.

Then follow games, when the boys who range in age from 6 to 16 years split up according to age groups or cabins and fight it out on the ball diamond or volleyball court. Other diversions are fishing, boating, swimming and gathering at night in the recreation hall around the fireplace to swap yarns and stage impromptu plays.

"DOLLY," camp work horse, is the boys' pet. Sergt. Binswanger lends a helping hand to five riders at a time

Canadians Train at Holabird

Holabird Quartermaster Depot, Md., July 25.—While youngsters from England are learning to fly at American Air Corps bases, other branches of the United States Army are doing their bit to help train the men of Britain in modern mechanized warfare.

Out here, on the edge of Baltimore, four Canadian officers and 50 men of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps are attending the Motor Transport School of the Quartermaster Department. By dismantling and reassembling automobile and truck engines, running gear and bodies, they learn how to do that work efficiently in the field.

In shops and classes, they are distributed among United States soldiers taking the same courses. Here and there in a great daylighted room, among intent heads in the American soldier's denim fatigue hat, appear blue berets or smart field caps with brass buttons down the front. Among the blue denim of the United States appears Canada's mustard-colored overalls on Canadian soldiers.

The Canadians live together and mess together and march to and from their classes in compact, arm-swinging columns. In class they are students of American machines, of the American way of dealing with machine's ailments, learning the American system of keeping them rolling.

Surprise Party for the Orthmans . . .

Capt. William S. Orthman, of the United States Capitol Police, and Mrs. Orthman came home Thursday night to find a surprise party awaiting them. Then the 62-year-old captain recalled the occasion—it was the eighth anniversary of his appointment as head of the Capitol hill police.

Highlight of the anniversary party was a testimonial letter signed by each of the 138 members of the force and read by Lieut. Roy W. Brown, also of the Capitol Police. It read, in part:

"The Capitol Police have functioned admirably under your leadership. The men are with you to a man, and you have stood by your personnel if they were in the right, and tempered justice with mercy if they were wrong. Withal, you have officiated as an able and conscientious chief, for which we salute you."

Capt. Orthman served 27 years in the Chicago police department before coming to Washington. He told the Army he was 21 in order to serve in the Spanish War at 18, and told them he was 35 so he could serve in the Mexican border campaign and World War at 38. His hobby used to be deep-sea fishing, until it took him an hour and 10 minutes to land a 68-pound sailfish at West Palm Beach several years ago.

"A little common sense is the foundation of a successful police department," the captain said. "They don't need all this training. I'll match my men with any 175 men the Metropolitan Police have."
